Monte Pearson Gives 2 Hits; Yankees Cop

Defeat Cincinnati 4 To 0 in Second Contest of Series
NO GAME FRIDAY

Winning Hurler Tosses No-Hit Ball for 7 1/3 Innings

Yankee Stadium, New York.—(P)—Giving one of the finest pitching exhibitions in world series history, Marcellus Monte Pearson held the Cincinnati Reds to two singles today to give the New York Yankees their second straight triumph, 4 to 0.

The teams travel to Cincinnati tomorrow and resume play Saturday. For seven and one-third innings Pearson was on his way to the first no-hit game ever pitched in baseball's biggest spectacle, but Ernie (Schnozzle) Lombardi stashed a sharp liner directly over second base to break this streak and in the ninth Bill Werber shot another bouncer through shortstop for the Reds' second safety.

Following is the play-by-play description of the game.

First Inning
Reds—Werber worked the count to three and two and then sent a high pop out to Gordon on the grass in front of second. Frey lifted a long lay fly to right center and DiMaggio loomed over to pull it in there. Goodman fouled to Rolfe in front of the third base boxes. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Yankees—The haze had settled down over the outfield considerably and it was difficult to read the scoreboard from the stands back of the plate. Crossetti let the count reach two and one then dumped a single in short left center, the ball just sailing over Myers' outstretched glove. Crossetti was nearly picked off first base by Lombardi's fast throw but just got back to the bag in time. Rolfe bounced the ball to Walters who threw to Myers at second, forcing Lombardi but Myers' peg to first was too late to catch Rolfe and he was safe on the fielder's choice. Frey took Keller's hot grounder and stepped on second, forcing Rolfe. Keller was safe on first as there was no play there. DiMaggio backed Berger almost to the gate in front of the Yankee bullpen in deep left for his long fly. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Second Inning
Reds—DiMaggio trotted into left center to take McCormick's left. Lombardi fouled off five pitches then sent a long fly to Selkirk deep in left center. The Reds were lined up on the steps of their bullpen intent on the game while the Yankees as usual just sat back on the bench and enjoyed the proceedings. Craft worked the count to two and two then fanned swinging at a low breaking curve. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Yankees—Dickey received a nice hand as he came to bat, apparently as a reward for his ninth-inning single which won yesterday's game. Dickey was called out on strikes on three pitches as Walters worked the corners beautifully. Selkirk dropped a Texas league single in short center but was out at second trying to stretch it. Craft to Myers. Craft pulled down Gordon's fly in center. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Third Inning
Reds—Excer for the far reaches of the under deck in left field, the stands were comfortably filled around the park by this time. Berger shot a long fly to Selkirk in left. Myers was called out on three strikes. Pearson fooling him for the third strike on a drop that broke across the knees. Rolfe took Walters' bouncer near third and threw him out easily. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Yankees—Dahlgren's liner bounced safely in left field and into the left field boxes for a ground rule two-base hit. Pearson laid down a nice sacrifice bunt and was thrown out. Turn to page 27 col. 7

Long Session May be Ended At Noon Friday

Assembly Approval Expected for $5,000,000 Relief Bill

SENATE IN RECESS

Planned Highway Program Among Measures Caught in Jam

Madison.—(P)—The state legislature prepared for sine die adjournment today with a probability the record breaking session would end at noon tomorrow.

The lawmakers were in a mood to go home but miscellaneous bills and controversial issues tangled the machinery in both houses. The assembly voted to hold an afternoon session but the senate recessed at noon until 9 o'clock Friday morning.

One measure which it appeared would be lost in the shuffle was the bill re-enacting the state milk price control law, due to expire Dec. 31. Another was the code law for barbers, cosmeticians, cleaners and shoe repairers. Assembly opponents of the price fixing had these bills bottled up.

The house was expected to approve late today the $5,000,000 relief appropriation measure.

Road Program Held Up
The Thompson bill for a $70,000,000 planned highway program to extend over nine years was caught in a jam in the senate along with controversial proposal combining the national and state election tickets and appropriating $3,350 to reimburse assembly employees hired outside of civil service regulations.

Governor Heil cleared the last of his major appointments by filling two expired terms on the public service commission and obtaining control of that agency.

While the house was tied up under a call it performed some of the unusual adjournment ceremonies.

The members presented Speaker Thompson (R) Richard C. Carter, with a wrist watch and gave traveling bags to Chief Clerk John J. Slocum and Sergeant-at-Arms Robert A. Merrill.

With the legislature approaching sine die adjournment, and the bill to reorganize the commission apparently dead in the assembly, the governor acted quickly to send his nominations to the senate where they were confirmed immediately.

Whitney was confirmed 24 to 4. The automobile business in Madison. He was named to succeed former Commissioner R. Floyd Green in LaCrosse for the term ending in March, 1941. Green now is a member of the new state employment relations board, having been appointed by Governor Heil.

Peterson, assembly Republican leader, was nominated to succeed Chairman Fred Hunt, Milwaukee, for the term ending in March, 1945.

Nixon Third Member
Hunt had served since 1933 when he was named by former Governor Schmedeman and though his term expired last Monday he continued as a holdover.

The third member of the commission is Robert A. Nixon, Washburn, a LaFollette appointee.

Governor Heil had advocated abolishing the commission and appointing a single director. His resignation was accepted.

Former Publisher and Banker Dies at Home
Milwaukee.—(P)—Frank B. Desmond, 69, former banker and publisher, died unexpectedly of heart disease at his home here today. He retired nine years ago as manager of the credit department of the First Wisconsin National bank. He served as vice president of the Herald Citizen for 27 years, and also was vice president of the Catholic School Journal, a national educational magazine.

State Senator Injured When Car Hits Truck
Madison.—(P)—State Senator A. J. Connors (P) Barron, was injured last night when his automobile and a truck collided at a county road intersection on Highway 51 several miles south of Madison. He was brought to St. Mary's hospital here. Hospital attendants said he suffered rib fractures and face lacerations.

Wisconsin's Thanksgiving Day Nov. 30, Heil's Proclamation
Madison.—(P)—Governor Heil today formally proclaimed Nov. 30—the last Thursday of the month—as Thanksgiving day, asserting that he did so "in accord with the traditions of the past."

The governor previously announced he would not follow President Roosevelt's intention to advance the holiday one week.

The proclamation said: "The purpose of Thanksgiving days is to give thanks to almighty God for the blessings that are ours here in America. With the strife and struggle entailing bloodshed and misery in other sections of the world and with the threat of war hanging over countries outside the present zone of war, our nation is particularly fortunate in being removed from scenes in conflict. Ours is a land of peace. Our creed is goodwill toward all people."

"It has been the custom to designate the last Thursday of November as Thanksgiving day. In line with these ideals and in accord with the traditions of the past I proclaim Nov. 30 Thanksgiving day."

"It is my hope that our citizens will use this day for the purpose of giving thanks for the privilege that is ours to enjoy the blessings of liberty in this our country."

After he filed Mrs. June's suit, Smith disclosed that Davis also was prepared to sue for divorce. The charges, Smith said, would be that Mrs. Davis had left his home to live with another man.

Department Store Fire Causes $20,000 Damage
Ratford, Wis.—(P)—Fire burned out the basement and first floor of the Hopp department store today, causing damage estimated at $20,000. Firemen fought the blaze, which started in the basement, for an hour before getting it under control.

Westphal Refuses To Appear in Lobby Hearing at Madison

Madison.—(P)—Assemblyman Charles F. Westphal (R) Milwaukee, subpoenaed as a prosecution witness at the preliminary hearing for Fred W. Cords, Milwaukee, charged with illegal lobbying, has notified Dane county officials he would stand on his constitutional rights as a legislator and refuse to appear in superior court next Friday.

Deputy Sheriff Albert Dahle said Westphal disclosed his decision when the officer served the subpoena. The constitution provides immunity for legislators from any civil process during a legislative session, or for 15 days before and after.

The charge that Cords engaged in lobbying before he registered at the secretary of state's office was filed by Attorney General John E. Martin.

Other witnesses subpoenaed for the hearing were Assemblyman Arthur J. Balzer (D) West Allis, and Robert J. Meyer, Madison newspaper man.

2 Oklahoma Banks Robbed; Salesman Held for 40 Hours

Robber Threatens to 'Blow Place Sky-High' With Nitroglycerine

Picher, Okla.—(P)—Three desperadoes revived Oklahoma's rip-roaring bank bandit days with a sensational threat to blow up a Picher bank with nitroglycerine after kidnapping a salesman and holding him captive more than 40 hours.

The $1,195 holdup of the First State bank here and another at Webster Falls were the first in 19 months in Oklahoma—once the scene of almost daily raids by such dare-devils as Pretty Boy Floyd.

The nitroglycerine bandits started their spurge Monday night with the kidnapping of Raymond C. Quirk, 49-year-old Tulsa salesman, at Vinetta, Okla., where they robbed a filling station for "cigarette money."

Yesterday they sent their leader, a 25-year-old blond, to rob the Picher bank while a second stood guard outside and a third held Quirk hostage 17 miles away.

The blond youth demanded of Clarence Miller, bank employee: "Do you know what nitroglycerine is?"

Miller, bewildered, turned to Constable Clarence "Blondie" McLaughlin, who had just walked in, and repeated the question.

Without waiting for a reply, the bandit pulled out a bottle partially filled with a colorless liquid and announced: "Well, you know what it is now."

He quickly dismissed the constable, lined up him, Miller and three customers and demanded $5,000 from Cashier W. A. Brewer "or I'll blow this place sky-high."

Brewer showed out a stack of bills, counting $4,000 in currency into a wastebasket.

The youth grabbed the money, fled to a waiting car and returned to Quirk. The salesman said "he threatened to shoot me with a big .45 but I protested, I hadn't done anything so they decided just to tie me up in my automobile."

Two shabby youths about 24 years old, one of them the Webber, fled State bank at gunpoint and fled with all its cash—an undetermined amount.

"We're poor boys and we need it," they told Cashier S. L. Weatherly.

Fires Three Shots at Girl Then Shoots Self To Death at Green Bay
Green Bay.—(P)—Sergeant Henry Guerin of Green Bay police said today a man who carried a social security card with the name of William R. Haney, Pueblo, Colo., shot and killed himself this morning after firing three shots at a girl who spurned his advances.

The man, about 38, registered at a downtown rooming house, Guerin said, and struck a maid over the head with a pistol when she resisted him.

The maid, stunned temporarily, regained consciousness and fled down a stairway as her assailant fired after her, the three shots going wild.

He then shot himself in the head, the officer reported.

Divorce Suit Filed in Wife-Trading Mixup
Lapeer, Mich.—(P)—A new move in the mixed marital affairs of Clarence June and George Davis, who traded mates and divided their children, came today as Mrs. Edith June filed suit for divorce from June, the father of her 10 children.

The suit was filed by Kenneth Smith, counsel for the defense during the trial and conviction of June, Mrs. June, Davis and Mrs. Mildred Davis on charges of lewd and lascivious cohabitation. The four are scheduled to be sentenced this week.

After he filed Mrs. June's suit, Smith disclosed that Davis also was prepared to sue for divorce. The charges, Smith said, would be that Mrs. Davis had left his home to live with another man.

Hitler Visits Warsaw; Talks Early Friday

Germans Hope Reichstag Address Will Outline Basis for Peace

REVIEWS FORCES

Nazis Warn Speculation On Nature of Speech Is 'Hazardous'

Berlin.—(P)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler today pronounced his Polish campaign complete after he reviewed the troops who conquered Warsaw and told his soldiers "I know you are ready for anything."

Berlin.—(P)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler went in triumph today to Warsaw, Poland's fallen capital, and inspected the Nazi forces which effected the city's surrender.

He reviewed a parade of the victorious forces immediately after the inspection.

First word of his activity in dismembered Poland on the eve of his world-awaited reichstag speech came in a report from the fuhrer's field headquarters by DNB, German officials news agency.

Officials earlier had refused to say whether Hitler had come to Warsaw and his flag still flew over the chancellery.

They included Colonel General Walther von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the German army; Colonel General Erhard Milch, general inspector of the air force; Colonel General Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, eastern commander-in-chief of high command; and leading roles in directing the attack on Warsaw, Colonel General Walther von Reichenau and Colonel General Johannes Blaskowitz.

Others With Fuhrer
Among those who accompanied the fuhrer on his triumphal visit were: Colonel General Wilhelm Keitel, chief of high command of the armed forces; Heinrich Himmler, head of all German police organizations; Dr. Hans Heinrich Lammers, member of the wartime ministerial council as liaison officer between the council and Hitler; and Dr. Otto Dietrich, secretary of state in charge of press relations.

Germans pinned their peace hopes today on the possibility that Hitler's reichstag speech tomorrow would outline a basis on which hostilities might be ended.

The fuhrer was scheduled to speak at noon (5 a. m. C.S.T.) to members of his completely submissive legislature, possibly to pronounce some new German attitude.

Police and Firemen Must Pay More Into Their Pension Funds

Madison.—(P)—Governor Heil signed late yesterday a bill liberalizing police and firemen's pension provisions. It was introduced by the state and local government committee.

The measure, representing a compromise between demands of service organizations for larger allowances and objections of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities to greater expenses, would:

Increase contributions of police and firemen from one to three and a half per cent of their salaries, and require cities to raise their fund payments from one to two and a half per cent of local license fee returns.

Establish uniform standards for retirement—after 22 years of service at 57 years of age—for all men hired after Jan. 1, 1940. Policemen may now retire after 22 years on the force regardless of age and firemen after 22 years if they are 52 years old.

Raise benefits for dependent children from $6 to $12 a month and their maximum age limit from 18 to 18 years. Widows would receive 65 per cent of their deceased husbands' salaries instead of 50 per cent.

Prisoner Flees From Portage County Jail
Stevens Point.—(P)—Sheriff Joe Heitlinger said today that Raymond Popella, 18, of Plainfield, awaiting sentence on a burglary charge, had escaped from the Portage county jail. The youth, charged with robbing a market at Bancroft Sept. 23, slipped out while a trusty was serving a tray of food in the cell block yesterday noon, the sheriff said.

Another court said that in attempting to restrict the tax commission the former secretary swore he had made a full report of his income. The complaint charged his actual income "was greatly in excess" of the amount reported.

Embargo Repeal Would Bring War 'Pressure', Senator Says

Washington.—(P)—"Once we have taken sides through action by our government in order to make arms available to England and France, the pressure will be terrific to get us into the war," Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Wisconsin Progressive and an opponent of the proposed arms embargo repeal, declared last night in a radio address.

Speaking in the national forum of NBC and the Washington Star, LaFollette said those advocating repeal of the ban against arms sales to warring nations were "risking a little plunge into war, partly for the fool's gold it will bring, partly because they are willing to take sides."

"But you cannot take sides and then pull back," he added. "That was the lesson of the last war for us."

The Wisconsin senator referred to Great Britain and France as "these partners who will soon be asking us to join them in another waltz of death and destruction," and said these countries had helped to strangle every effort toward democracy in Germany and thus became "the illegitimate parents of nazism." He mentioned their conduct concerning Ethiopia, Czechoslovakia and Poland and said it was not a record to inspire confidence and trust.

LaFollette expressed the opinion it was "just so much eyewash" to say that "unless we get into this war and bring about a victory for us."

Senate Leaders to Consider Changes In Neutrality Bill

Overton in Appeal for Re-entention of Embargo Law

SEES WAR THREAT

Claims Sale of Munitions Would be 'Armed Intervention'

Washington.—(P)—Senator Overton (D-La.), urging retention of the arms embargo, told the senate today that the sale of armaments to European belligerents would constitute "armed intervention on the part of America."

Carrying on the opposition argument to the administration's neutrality bill, the Louisiana senator asserted:

"Let us not entertain the fond delusion that raising the embargo is not a step toward war. Soon the American dollar will be following American arms and the American flag and the American soldier will be following both to the battlefields of Europe."

"For my part," he declared, "I am unwilling to take a step that may, and probably will lead us into a foreign war that will make widows of our wives orphans of our children, corpses of our young men and bankrupts of us all."

"Sisters of Peace"
Overton said that "neutrality and national defense are the twin sisters of peace for America."

"I fear no successful invasion of the United States by any foreign nation or combination of nations," he added. "I do not apprehend that we shall be subjected to foreign domination, but I do entertain the apprehension that in the event of our becoming engaged in another war we shall be saddled with a home-made dictatorship."

Overton, usually an administration supporter, argued that President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull had favored the arms embargo in the past.

"There is no inconsistency," he continued, "in permitting the export to belligerents of supplies for noncombatants that may likewise be used by combatants and otherwise diverted to the purposes of war—such as foodstuffs, raiment and copper—and in placing an absolute embargo on weapons manufactured solely for destruction and human massacre."

It makes the second time the ordinance problem has bounced back in the ordinance committee's lap and some one ventured the remark after last night's gathering that perhaps the committee might set out and do the codifying, since no attorney has yet been hired.

Aldermen alighted on a paragraph in the street and bridge committee report for their opening argument, a recommendation to the effect that the city engineer's plan for the depressed sewer district be approved.

This district, it seems, at least that on which immediate action is contemplated, lies south of Wisconsin avenue between Badger Turn to page 2 col. 1.

Dinneen Facing Perjury Charge

Action Result of His Contesting State Tax Assessment

Madison.—(P)—William M. Dinneen, former secretary of the public service commission, was charged today with having perjured himself in contesting a state tax assessment for alleged unreported income tax from 1923 to 1935.

Action was brought in superior court by the attorney general's office.

Dinneen pleaded innocent before Judge Roy H. Proctor. Bail was fixed at $1,000 and preliminary hearing was set for 10 a. m. Oct. 13.

Dinneen also faces trial in Dane county circuit court on charges he committed malfeasance while secretary of the commission by furnishing confidential information to the defunct E. B. Buckman Investment company.

The new action grew out of a state investigation of dealings he was alleged to have had with the H. M. Byllesby and Company, of Chicago, in a subsequent attempt to collect $60,000 from him on $222,000 of income. After Dinneen contested the assessment it was reduced to $18,000.

The perjury warrant charged the Byllesby company paid Dinneen $63,500 "for some services rendered or to be rendered, the exact nature of which is unknown."

Another court said that in attempting to restrict the tax commission the former secretary swore he had made a full report of his income. The complaint charged his actual income "was greatly in excess" of the amount reported.

Wisconsin's Tax Bill Up Over $14,000,000 In Last Fiscal Year

Madison.—(P)—Wisconsin residents paid approximately $14,000,000 more in state and local taxes during the fiscal year ending last June 30 than were paid the previous year, the state tax commission reported today.

The 1939 total was $201,368,105. For 1938 it was $187,764,833, a difference of $13,603,272.

General property taxes were about $4,000,000 higher, income taxes dropped $4,000,000 and inheritance taxes were off about $2,000,000, while motor vehicle levies remained at around $34,000,000.

Virtually all of the increase was accounted for in special state taxes which jumped from $9,611,004 to $34,639,603. In this group unemployment compensation taxes were highest at $15,576,667.

WANTS BILL SPLIT

Senator Charles W. Tobey, New Hampshire Republican, urged in the upper house today that neutrality legislation should be split into two parts—one repealing the arms embargo and the other providing restrictions on American shipping and travel.

That, he asserted, "misleads the people and jeopardizes the peace of the United States."

"There is no good reason," he told his colleagues, "why we should not have both the arms embargo and the cash and carry provision."

Washington.—(P)—Senator George (D-Ga.) reiterated today that senate authors of the administration's neutrality legislation would meet "soon" to consider proposed changes, including the demands of shipping interests for modification of the restrictions on shipping.

On the senate floor, meanwhile, Senator Tobey (R-N.H.) renewed his argument that the legislation should be returned to the foreign relations committee and split into two parts—one repealing the arms embargo and the other embodying restrictions on American shipping and travel.

Tobey asked that the latter provision, including a prohibition against the transportation of goods to belligerents in American ships, be enacted at once and that repeal of the arms embargo be considered later.

George, one of the Democratic members of the foreign relations committee who drafted the bill, said there had been growing opposition from shipping interests against a provision prohibiting American vessels from carrying any materials to belligerents and barring them from combat zones.

Consider Revision
"It is my judgment," George said, "that the Democratic members of the committee will meet again soon and consider some revision in this section."

Representatives of large shipping concerns, the senator reported, were attempting to work out some plan to prevent destruction of trans-Atlantic commerce of American vessels. He added, however, that none of the plans thus far suggested was "at all acceptable."

Tobey, his colleagues that some members had suggested his proposal to read newspaper excerpts in support of his demand to split the bill was filibustering.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," he asserted.

He argued that unless the procedure he suggested was adopted "our ships will be in danger of being sunk in the war zones at any time and thus endanger the determination of this country to be kept out of the European war."

Under a senate agreement, Tobey's motion will be voted upon Monday.

Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) and Senator Pittman (D-New.) predicted Tobey's motion would be defeated.

The New Hampshire senator advanced his suggestion late yesterday after Senators Connally (D-Texas) and Vandenberg (R-Mich.) had spoken for and against the administration measure, which would repeal the arms embargo and substitute a "title and territory" system of sales to belligerent nations.

Tobey still held the floor today at resumption of the senate session (11 a. m. C. S. T.).

Tobey argued that the "title and carry" provisions should be enacted immediately to avoid American ships being sunk, as they were before United States entry into the world war.

Pittman said it was "perfectly absurd" to divide the bill and declared even many opponents of repealing the embargo would not go along with Tobey on the proposal.

Barkley, who left last night for Kentucky for the funeral of his colleague, Senator Logan, looked for a final vote on the bill in the third week of debate.

He said there was a chance of it coming earlier, however, because most of the "longer" speeches were Turn to page 2 col. 5

BALLOT MONDAY

Barkley Predicts Defeat Of Motion When It Comes Up for Vote

Washington.—(P)—Senator Nye (R-N.D.) demanded today that the administration agree to divorce proposed repeal of the arms embargo from its "cash and carry" program of neutrality legislation.

Proponents of the administration legislation, he charged, "are taking the position that" repeal of the embargo must be effected before other provisions of the pending neutrality bill, which would restrict the nation's foreign trade, could be enacted.

That, he asserted, "misleads the people and jeopardizes the peace of the United States."

"There is no good reason," he told his colleagues, "why we should not have both the arms embargo and the cash and carry provision."

Lawrence Insists Key to Peace Is In Capital City

U. S. Could be Instrumental in Promoting Armistice, He Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Regardless of how pleasant or unpleasant may be the effect on either side of belligerents, the United States government will not hesitate to transmit peace of terms or otherwise advance the cause of peace.

Rumors and reports from Europe that America would be invited to sit in on any council to make peace have been unofficially discussed, but, until a concrete proposal confronts the American government, no official comment can be made.

The desire, however, to end the European war at the earliest possible moment and to persuade each side to consider an armistice runs strong in the official group. It is well recognized that Great Britain publicly says no peace terms can be accepted which do not provide for an attainment of objectives for which she went to war, and it is likewise understood that Germany cannot publicly set forth terms which would involve a retreat. But underlying the peace talk is a frank realization that Germany does not want to keep on fighting, and that the British and French would welcome an honorable way out.

"The war has begun in the first instance without taking into account that the British and French would fight. Herr Hitler felt confident he could depend on a localized war, that, as soon as he seized and subjugated Poland, all would be over. He may have even reasoned that, in view of the British treaty with Poland, the former could not avoid participation, but that, if confronted with a conquered Poland, the British might subsequently take a different view."

Hitler miscalculated. His position and now wants to end the war. He is too well acquainted with British pronouncements to think that a mere restatement of his pacific aims toward the British and French would be adequate. He knows that some form of guarantee must be forthcoming which would satisfy British and French opinion. With the entrance of Russia into the picture as guardian of a collection of lesser states, thus blocking Nazi progress to the east, Herr Hitler cannot be as happy now as his makeshift alliance seemed last month to indicate.

That Hitler earnestly wants peace now is unquestionably true. Shall his effort be spurned just because he has made a mistake? Are the allied statesmen shrewd enough to penetrate the bluff and threat and bluster of public speeches and to realize that a prolonged war means the economic ruin of all Europe? There may have to be a good deal of swallowing of pride on each side, but loss of pride is of negligible importance if there is forthcoming a guarantee against constant recurrence of the use of force as a means of altering boundaries.

Maybe the statesmanship of the world is ready to return to collective security—a family of nations instead of a balance of armed power—and maybe the German people will join such a union today in the midst of a war they cannot possibly be relishing. An association of nations which does not provide for a gradual reduction of armament would be futile, but also any association of nations which did not provide for a gradual revision of territorial and economic arrangements of the past would be equally futile.

U. S. Key To Peace

The key to peace is right here in Washington. If the isolationist group which is so eager to keep American boys and American families from being dragged into war would use their talents and energies to get back of plans to formulate a world peace program, the embargo issues would soon become academic. But unhappily in the past the same group which is now fighting a revision of the embargo has been opposing all effort to exert on behalf of America any tangible influence for international cooperation. The United States may have been unsuccessful in 1915 and 1916 in endeavoring to persuade the belligerents to lay down their arms, but it ultimately turned out that America was able, as a consequence of those preliminaries, to bring about an armistice. History might repeat itself now. Certainly there is nothing to be lost for the allies to agree to an armistice and discussion now, each side maintaining status quo in a military and naval sense until the issues were thoroughly examined.

It is not unlikely that an armistice once proclaimed would lead to peace, because each government knows that any force will be used because it already has been used. The British and French would be making a serious mistake if they did not set forth their aims specifically and concretely and in such a manner as to provide a way out for Herr Hitler. To stop the war now is not "to surrender" in ignoble fashion, as was suggested in the British parliamentary debate this week, because to surrender to a higher law than mankind's brutishness is never ignoble.

Clapper Thinks It's Urgent To Adopt 'Cash, Carry' Clause

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—For reasons of state an official pretense is maintained as to the purpose of the arms embargo repeal. But it does not seem in the public interest that private citizens should avoid looking the facts straight in the eye.

The real purpose of repealing the arms embargo is to supply finished war materials—particularly airplanes—to the British and French. That is the end which motivates the White house and the state department and it is the unspoken objective of which every senator is conscious.

Nothing is to be gained by deceiving American public opinion concerning this point. To say that real neutrality requires repeal of the arms embargo is pretense, for our purpose actually is to give a break to the allied side. To contend that "international law"—that neat phrase which can be used to cover anything a nation wishes to do—requires repeal of the embargo is again playing with words. We can properly excuse officials and senators, all occupying responsible positions, for insisting upon these points. Citizens cannot always be frank. But the people are entitled to know what the real situation is.

Because if we understand the real reason for repealing the arms embargo, we shall be less likely to be negligent in taking the protective action which must accompany it. To repeal the arms embargo and then go cruising about the world insisting upon exercise of our "neutral rights" would be dangerous folly. In 1915, we were permitting American citizens to travel to England on British munition carriers. More than that, when several hundred American tourists were caught aboard the Lusitania on her fatal crossing, Woodrow Wilson insisted to the German government upon the "indisputable right" of American citizens to travel where they would upon the high seas.

American Citizens are Restrained Under Law

Fortunately we have stopped that sort of business and the neutrality law now on the books has enabled this government to restrain American citizens from thus exposing themselves and their nation to the disasters which helped carry us into the previous war.

But we have at this moment no statute that keeps American ships out of the danger zone. Every day newspaper dispatches report the sinking of neutral ships in European waters, some of them carrying only such apparently peaceful commodities as lumber. Our American ships are still free to carry everything except finished munitions to any belligerent port. This is the most dangerous sort of traffic, protected only by legalistic contentions which don't save sunken ships or lost citizens. Arguments will be all the more difficult to sustain after the arms embargo is repealed.

Delay Invitation to Involvement in War

Therefore, the most important action, insofar as keeping us out of war is concerned, is not the arms embargo but the so-called cash-and-carry provision of the pending bill. Every day's delay in enacting this provision to compel all shipments to belligerents to go in foreign bottoms is an invitation to involvement. So far as we are concerned, the arms embargo is a secondary matter. It is important in that its repeal will help the British and French. But that objective is

Protestant Group to Convene Next Wednesday at Waupaca

Waupaca—The Waupaca County Federation of Protestant Church Women will hold its annual meeting Wednesday at the First Baptist church in Waupaca. Each organization represented has been requested to give up a report of the year's activities. All church women have been invited to be present.

The meeting will open at 10 o'clock in the morning, will close at noon to permit of a luncheon which will be served in the church dining hall, and reconvene at 1:15 in the afternoon.

After an opening song in the morning Mrs. W. W. Irvine of Manawa will read the scripture lesson, Mrs. G. N. Doody, Waupaca, will offer a prayer. The welcome will be given by Mrs. D. F. Burnham, Waupaca, and the response to the welcome by Mrs. G. S. Barrington, Crystal Lake. Mrs. Clifford Johnson, Waupaca, will sing a solo before the reports of the church organizations are heard. Reports will be followed by a reading of the constitution and the appointment of committees.

Mrs. Arthur Ritchie, Royaltown, will lead the afternoon's devotions and members of the Waupaca Baptist church will follow this with a playlet, "The Church Door Keys." Mrs. R. K. Landsay, Manawa, will report on the Methodist Uniting Conference held this fall in St. Louis and Mrs. John Seffert, also of Manawa will give a vocal solo. A report of "World Baptists" will be made by Mrs. G. N. Doody, wife of the pastor of the Waupaca Baptist church, who recently made a trip to a Baptist conference in Georgia. Unfinished business will be followed by the installation of officers in charge of Mrs. George Stevens Weyauwega. "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," by the entire group, will close the day's conference.

Mrs. Charles Button, Waupaca, is president and Mrs. Walter Olson, Waupaca, secretary. Miss Lettie B. Ritchie, Royaltown is the organizer of the conference. This will be the seventh annual convention.

ANOTHER COLONEL

Madison—(P)—Appointment of Senator Charles N. Orr, St. Paul, a member of the Minnesota legislature, to Governor Heil's staff of honorary colonels was announced at the executive office Wednesday. He became colonel No. 81.

Police will have less pain in pounding beats in London for every police station is to have a store of special foot powder and Scotland Yard is to have a chiroprapist to give free treatment.

less important to us than that we keep out of the danger zone.

Senator Adams of Colorado says it is outrageous for the United States to make "helms" of American citizens who wish to exercise their theoretical "right" to carry goods into belligerent ports. But if we take action to assist one side in the war, we must at the same time deny ourselves the exercise of some of our "rights" as a neutral.

The big lesson we learn from 1917 is that we cannot expect to be a supply base for one side in a war and still insist upon roaming around in the thick of the fighting zone with all of the immunity of a Red Cross relief unit.

Goodland Continues to Break Precedent as 2nd in Command

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—The 76-year-old lieutenant governor of Wisconsin, a veteran of many decades of politics and public life, continues to break precedents.

Observers read political importance into the terse and decisive public statement which the senate president, Walter H. Goodland, made in which he advised Governor Heil to drop his efforts to enact a gross income tax without delay.

Lieutenant governors of Wisconsin have rarely exerted any important influence in shaping the policies of administrations of which they are a part. By tradition they confined themselves to presiding over the state senate, where occasional tie votes gave them an opportunity to express themselves on legislative issues.

Goodland is Exception

Circumstances combined this year to make the present lieutenant governor an exception. Several times Goodland has had the opportunity to decide questions by his vote; the most recent was his defeat of Heil's final tax program, the one quarter of one per cent levy on all gross receipts.

In a succinct statement, the coalition-elected lieutenant governor in effect joined the ranks of Governor Heil's critics when he declared that such a tax would be "an added burden to the already perplexed businessman, who has difficulty in keeping track of the numerous taxes now levied against him," and an added burden on "the defenseless farmers."

There was political dynamite in this statement, capitol politicians agreed, in Goodland's public declaration:

"Under no circumstances would I vote to place any added burden on Wisconsin farmers."

"The farmer is defenseless." "Unlike the business man he cannot add taxes to his overhead and shift the burden to consumers. He is governed by the market price of his products, a market price over which he has no control."

Significant also was his pointed explanation that he "had no part in formulating the proposed tax amendment. I was not approached by the governor nor any member of the legislature regarding it before it was presented in the senate."

Pupils are Completing Study Unit on Nature

The fifth grade geography class is studying the New England states. First and second grades have completed booklets on "The Home."

Students with perfect attendance records last month are Mary Ann Ganter, Joyce and Leroy Henn, Gerald Foley, Helen and Glenda Gehrke, Helen and Mary Ann Leisgang, Leonard and Albert Masas and Rita and Vernon Landwehr.

Plan Reception For New Pastor

Father D. L. Krembs to be Honored Friday Evening at Waupaca

Waupaca—Mrs. George Clausen, Weyauwega, is in charge of the reception which is being planned in honor of Father D. L. Krembs, recently installed as pastor of the churches of St. Mary Magdalene of Waupaca, and St. Peter and Paul of Weyauwega, Friday evening in the social hall of St. Mary Magdalene. A short playlet will be presented in addition to special music by the choir. The reception includes members of both parishes as well as people of the two communities.

Special installation services were held Sunday evening with several visiting priests participating. The Rev. F. A. Rielander, Wisconsin Veteran's Home, a former pastor of the church, the Rev. John Haen, Lanark, who succeeds Father Krembs in that parish, the Rev. C. Kabot, assistant priest at St. Stephen's church, Stevens Point, and the Rev. R. J. Fox, New London, of the Waupaca county deanery assisted in the service.

Father Fox preached the installation sermon. Special music was followed by the profession of faith and "Some Holy Ghost."

Father Krembs succeeds Father Francis P. Schoettl, who came to St. Mary Magdalene's church Oct.

Highway 41 May Be Scheduled for Improvement Soon

State Road Commission Head Says Need for Action Is Obvious

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—William E. O'Brien, chairman of the state highway commission, today expressed the opinion that Highway 41, one of the most important traffic arteries in the state, will have to be reconstructed or substantially improved soon.

"I think Highway 41 ought to have some attention. All you have to do to learn that is to drive over it," said the head of the state's highway establishment.

The commission recently advised the Winnebago county board, through D. F. Culbertson, its Green Bay division engineer, to begin the purchase of right of way for the proposed relocation of that stretch of the highway from Oshkosh to Neenah, thus substantiating the belief that the Highway 41 relocation long discussed by Fox river valley officials is on the state's program for early action.

Because of the huge probable total of expense which will be involved, and the financial difficulties of the state government, the commission has steadily declined to predict when definite action will be taken.

Recent highway commission tests have shown that at some points on Highway 41 peak daily traffic is heavier than on the double lane highways leading into such metropolitan centers as Chicago. On a single day in Waukesha county 19,000 vehicles were known to have passed a single point on 41.

Traffic in other sections is correspondingly heavy. A daily average count of about 4,500 has been established near Oshkosh, a daily average of approximately 6,000 between Menasha and Appleton, and about 5,000 between DePere and Green Bay, according to commission figures.

The highway commission this year let contracts totalling about $7,000,000, although the original outlay contemplated was near $10,000,000. It is believed that the administration has cautioned delay in highway construction because of the low balance in state funds. It is known that Hill earlier this year held up highway contract signatures for a considerable period.

Rush Medical College Will be Closed in 1942

Chicago—President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago announced Wednesday that Rush Medical College, founded in 1842, would be closed to undergraduate students in 1942 and a graduate medical school established in its place.

The university has operated the college in affiliation with its own medical school since 1924, when it acquired the Rush Medical college buildings.

All students who register at Rush next fall for their last two years of work will be graduated there.

The famous institution, medical alma mater for thousands of doctors now scattered through the nation, was established 97 years ago largely through the efforts of Dr. Daniel Barnard. It was at Rush that "laughing gas" was first administered, in 1847, and that chloroform was first used in Chicago as an anesthetic for surgery.

In days gone men with criminal instincts but lacking even a dash of courage attached themselves to dukes or politicians, depending upon the country, and sought a living in return for vociferous shouts of approval and an occasional cobblestone hurled in the direction of some opponent of their liege lord or master.

In democracies this rather worthless and unadmirable fraction of the population have organized into the Communist party. But the diagnosis of their disease is the same the world over. They have a chronic antipathy towards work and they endeavor to cloak this scurvy by shouting as noisily as a boiler factory.

Democracies have tried to treat them decently only to be bitten in return. They have attempted to protect this human driftwood from attack by others only to be stabbed in the back.

And now, despite our fidelity to the democratic principle of treating other humans with a degree of decency they may not merit, the somber question arises whether this treatment may not have given these Reds a weight in the scales of national action far beyond their numbers or importance.

In this connection observe the conduct of France and the difficulties these fellows made for a nation that was trying to maintain their rights along with others. The fact that Daladier has found it necessary to suppress the Communists and scatter their organization is not now the important matter. That may be merely a war measure.

But it is appropriate to refer to Daladier's public statement made about ten months before this war broke out because it sums up out of actual experience Red conduct and Red activities. Said Daladier on October 27 last:

"The violence and intransigence of this party have paralyzed my course of action. When their papers and speakers were vulgarly attacking Mr. Neville Chamberlain, who has worked with admirable faith to save peace, did they not then weaken France's position? When they were every day sending requests and ultimatums to the French government, did they facilitate our task? When they cast aspersions upon the governments with whom we were engaged in perilous negotiations, did they not risk hindering all chances of agreement and so plunging us into war? ... I am bound to say that, in another sphere, the political attitude of the leaders of the Communist party has resulted, not in any support, but in sabotage of the work of the government."

In 1936 the Reds obtained 72 seats in the Chamber of Deputies of France and thereby became third in voting power in that branch of the French parliament.

This voting strength together with the destructive tactics pursued even when the nation had its back to the wall in the attempt to save peace probably brought Hitler and Stalin both great seas of satisfaction but, worse still, may have become a deciding factor in the erroneous shaping of the policies of these two.

Dissension at home is always a powerful element when one nation appraises the power of another. When Hitler was driving his bargain with Stalin does anyone for a moment suppose that he did not emphasize over and over again the fact that Stalin could rely upon a large share of French political power sustaining him?

Thus the Reds stomp democracies with another problem—how to preserve their individual rights and yet prevent their organization from exercising either nationally or internationally an influence far beyond their poor mentality to bear.

OLDSTERS, WATCH YOUR STEP!

Although people over 65 years of age constitute only 6 per cent of our population they provide 25 per cent of the fatal accidents in the country annually.

That they are physically unable to withstand the shock of accident is one of the factors that increases the fatalities among them but their noticeable carelessness in respect to walking and crossing the public highways is the only way we can account for the fact that they provide two-thirds of the deaths from accidents in which vehicles strike pedestrians.

Blurred eyesight is, no doubt, a contributing cause. Slower moving limbs provide an immense disadvantage against the swiftly starting and more swiftly moving traffic of the day.

But what has become of the value of their experience? Knowing these facts are they to become less easily directed than the school children who have so agreeably submitted to the training of the day built upon caution and watchfulness?

CHAMBERLAIN'S GREAT OPPORTUNITY

It appears accepted that Hitler will make overtures of peace to France and England.

It is not easy to see how he can avoid doing so and yet if he does he will be lowering his guard for a terrific blow at his vitals.

For he will be giving Chamberlain the almost priceless opportunity of presenting to the German people a correction of the wrongs of Versailles and a promise of long peace in the future.

No matter now that Versailles created Hitler. No matter either that Germany could never obtain justice without force. That belongs in the past with the water that yesterday went under the bridge.

Germany has obtained a large measure of justice. But even were she to obtain the return of all that was properly hers she would still menace the world with Hitler.

If the democracies are in the hands of great statesmen devoid of vengeance they may answer through Chamberlain by insisting upon the return of the German republic to the German people, a republic that was destroyed by force. That is the keystone of any arch of peace. Compared to the advantages of the peace what matter it that Britain offer to return Germany's colonies too? No nation ever obtained colonies by fairer methods or with clearer title than Germany.

If the rape of the German republic could be undone, if the cruel destruction of the Kerensky liberal regime at Petrograd could be erased, if, in other words, we had genuinely democratic forms both at Berlin and Moscow, what real danger of war would exist? Danzig and the Polish Corridor are not beyond solution if their adjustment means peace to Poland and Germany for generations. Nothing is beyond solution when the rewards and advantages of peace are considered.

Were Chamberlain to answer the German demand for peace by offering to restore German property as it existed before World War No. 1, conditioned upon the return of the Weimar constitution, he would not only be constructing a policy studded with virtues but offering a program that the Nazis would have extreme difficulty in refusing in the face of the heart's desire of their own people.

THE SHADOW OF AN INTERNATIONAL FARMER

Something must be done soon or screamers 20 years hence won't even have a peg leg to stand on.

The DuPonts are fighting repeal of the embargo. The steel men, led by Mr. Weir, are fighting the repeal of the embargo. The bankers are pounding the table to get the people's attention so they may learn there is nothing to be made for anyone out of war.

To see the men who might expect orders for munitions contesting with grim determination the President's attempt to repeal the embargo, a lot of cold water is thrown upon that old and worm-eaten chestnut concerning the causes of war.

People cause war; intolerance of race, class, and religion causes war. Farmers who may want $2 wheat are more likely to cause war than munition makers since, in a country like ours, they have more influence.

We must have a cause for war even if we don't get the right one. When the people who themselves usually are responsible for a war are weak from its excesses and sore from its wounds we generate oratorical soothsayers to tell them that of course it wasn't their fault but the fault of an international banker or an international munition maker or an international scalawag of some sort.

The suggestion that the next culprit is going to be an international farmer, whatever that is, may not be so far wrong. And if the farmer god doesn't suit us why not name an international working man?

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

THE MILK STOOL

When grandpa hitched the dappled mare To the new buggy, he would say: "Go get the milk stool, if you care To go with me to town today."

Grandma and grandpa left no space When they sat in the buggy seat. And so the milk stool was my place. My joy in travel was complete

As I surveyed the dusty way And sometimes was allowed to hold The buggy whip A morning ray Of sunlight touched our house with gold.

I saw it grow small in my sight Because the buggy top was down. And then I watched with young delight The sun-flecked road that led to town.

The gentle hill that seemed so tall, The friendly birch and speaking pine, The stream meandering, were all Companions on this trip of mine.

But better still, the company Behind the old horse in the cool Sweet morning, when my grandpa's knee Steaded me on the pine milk stool.

When the Panama canal was opened, in 1914, many New York newspapers took no notice of the event whatever. The reason was that war had broken out in Europe a few days before. Since that time 100,000 vessels carrying half a billion tons of cargo have moved through the waterway.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—Travelogue:

Probably there are people who sleep soundly on Pullmans. I am not one of them. It isn't the motion of the train that hampers my rest. It is my constant curiosity. I am a fellow who can't take terrain for granted. I am forever sliding the shade up and looking out the window to see the country. Generally it is only night's blackness, but I keep on looking, feeding my curiosity on the occasional glimpses of farmhouse lights flickering afar. My greatest delight, however, is in roasting through a sleeping village, its street deserted and sentinelled only by corner lights that emphasize the desolation.

This time it was to Wheeling, W. Va., I rode a mere overnight scot by rail. Wheeling was honoring a four-year-old movie starlet, the cunning Carolyn Lee who speaks about 100 lines of dialogue in the picture "Honeymoon in Bali," and speaks them right well.

Carolyn Lee is another of the screen's fabulous accidents. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Copp, have lived most of the years of Carolyn Lee's life in hotels, and because a hotel lobby affords a little too much greater opportunity to meet people than does a secluded suburban home, the child got her chance in pictures. The operator of a Wheeling theatre saw the child in the lobby of the McClure Hotel on the very day her father arrived to assume an executive's post with the Wheeling Steel Corporation. Struck by the child's charm, he suggested that her picture be sent to an official of Paramount Pictures. Paramount was impressed, invited her to Chicago for a screen test, sent her on to Hollywood for more, and finally placed her under contract.

One moment Carolyn Lee behaves very much like an adult, and another she is a child again. Her memory is prodigious. She not only memorized her own difficult lines for "Honeymoon in Bali" but also learned by heart the lines of some of the other actors; and she can read them off with the voice inflections and mannerisms of the actors themselves.

She spent her first day on the set in Hollywood turning somersaults. That evening her mother said: "You must not do that, Carolyn. The director wants to make the picture, and he wasted the entire day because you were turning somersaults."

"He," replied Carolyn Lee, "thinks I'm just a child and don't know any better, so he let's me do it. I like to turn somersaults."

When the director heard about it he said, "That was the time you talked too much, young lady. Now I know that you know better. Therefore, you are going to do just what I tell you—and it won't be somersaults."

One of Carolyn's most effective schemes for interrupting the picture was to stop suddenly and say: "I want to whisper to my mama." Whenever a four-year-old child whispers to her mother the whisper is generally followed by the prompt departure of the child, hand in hand with her mother for the Ladies' Lounge or its equivalent, and no movie director can gainsay such departures. It got so that whenever Carolyn Lee started to say "I want to whisper," the electricians automatically turned off the lights, the actors relaxed and intermission was on.

One set used in the picture was an elaborate interior. There was a living room that opened into a dining room and a foyer, the three rooms being beautifully furnished to the smallest detail. Carolyn Lee saw in this layout a possible chance to escape whispering to mama. She went from one room to the other several times as though in quest of something, and finally returned to her mother completely puzzled.

"Mama," she whispered, "Where's the bathroom?" "There is no bathroom," her mother explained. "They do not need a bathroom in this set, so naturally they didn't make one."

Carolyn Lee was disgusted. "The movies are funny people, I think," she said with conviction. "It is very silly to build such a beautiful apartment and not have any bathroom in it. If they had a bathroom they wouldn't have to stop shooting every time I—"

"Shhh!" said the mother of Carolyn Lee.

Neither Carolyn Lee nor either of her parents appeared flustered over the cinema snafu that has suddenly beamed on the four-year-old "Frankly," said her father, "I don't see why they picked Carolyn Lee at all."

When I asked Carolyn Lee about her future Hollywood plans she was most definite in her reply that she was through with the cinema. I asked her why.

"I do not care for Hollywood," she answered with finality.

WAR CRAMPS SOUT TRADE

War has brought disaster to New Zealand's most unusual industry, it is stated at Wellington. The Chinese are no longer buying large quantities of New Zealand's dried fungus for their vegetable soup. About 70 years ago a Chinese, Chew Chong, who settled at New Plymouth, on the west coast of New Zealand, found that the special kind of fungus on stumps of trees was a marketable commodity in the home land. He paid the settlers a cent a pound for dried fungus and shipped it to China. Later the price rose to seven and even eight cents a pound, and the industry prospered. Today the sale of fungus for China is at the lowest ebb.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — California "Ham-and-Eggs" have set out to make this the last fight over foreign policy in which Senator Hiram Johnson will participate. They are out to beat him.

"Ham-and-Eggs" are not concerned, of course, with the current battle over the Neutrality act. Foreign affairs have nothing to do with their campaign. They have a plan to put jack in the jeans of every man and woman over 50. The idea has caught on so widely that within the past year they have elected a governor, a United States senator, and now hope to fasten their scheme solidly on California at a November election.

It might be added at this point that the proposed defeat of Senator Johnson is largely a by-product of the major enterprise. He is against "Ham-and-Eggs" so they are against him—or at least the leaders indicate they are. When he comes up for re-election next fall they will have a candidate against him—if they can—and shake him loose from the position he has held since 1915.

"Ham-and-eggs" is, of course, simply the popular title for the scheme under which a flood of money would be distributed in California by pouring it first into the hands of people over 50 years of age.

How It Works
The idea is this: Every Thursday all the "senior citizens" of California will be given paper slips of a face total of $20.00 each, but a circulating medium good only in California. The persons who get it will spend it. On one day each week the holder of the slip must buy a stamp (using real money) and stick it on the back of each $1 face amount.

The stamps will be issued by the state of California and the real money paid for the stamps will go to the treasury. At the end of a year each dollar of stamp supposedly will bear on its back $1.04 in stamps. The idea lost out last year by a margin so narrow it gave many solid citizens the shivers. At the same time, supporters of the idea were encouraged.

Control Democrats
How does Senator Johnson come into it? That is not hard to explain. "Ham-and-Eggs" is a California political organization. It appeals to the same voters who in 1934 almost installed Upton Sinclair and E.P. Clegg as part of the list in California. It appeals to the voters who follow Doctor Townsend.

Last year they took over control of the Democratic party, defeated Senator McAdoo in the primaries and swept on to victory in November. Republicans and old-line Democrats could not put up anything half so tempting.

Now Ellis Patterson, lieutenant governor, and one of the king-pins of the movement, has said he will seek the Democratic nomination for United States senator to oppose Johnson in 1940. If "Ham-and-Eggs" sticks to him in the primaries he undoubtedly will get the nomination.

'Johnson Myth'
Beating Johnson the following November is another matter. Johnson has become a tradition. In 1934 he was the candidate of every party. When he first ran in 1916, after a session as governor, Charles Evans Hughes, Republican presidential candidate, slighted him. Presumably California turned on Hughes and it cost him the state and the presidency Johnson was elected.

Johnson supporters already have accepted the prospect that he will not be the Democratic nominee in 1940. He once supported President Roosevelt and Roosevelt supported him. Now some Rooseveltians are against him and will help "Ham-and-Eggs" try to break what they call the "myth of Hiram Johnson." It won't be easy.

Thus there are two classes of "state aids," the money which is collected by the state but returned to the localities, and the additional funds which are budgeted biennially as state expense and returned to localities in the form of aids to run the schools, the hospitals and asylums, to maintain certain offices, such as county supervising teachers, county nurses, etc., to sponsor certain projects, such as county forestry and park development, and other purposes.

ECONOMIC LEVELING
An important corollary result has been to make of the state's taxing power an economic redistribution process. It has been pointed out, it is even probable that one of the motives for some of the more recent state taxes was to redistribute the cost of governmental support in Wisconsin, for there is a wide variation in the distribution of economic wealth in the state.

It can be demonstrated, for example, that Appleton and Outagamie county or Green Bay and Brown county annually contribute far more to the state treasury than the state treasury returns to those localities. At the same time it can be shown that Douglas county, one of the poorest in the state, receives benefits from Madison far out of proportion to its contribution to the state exchequer.

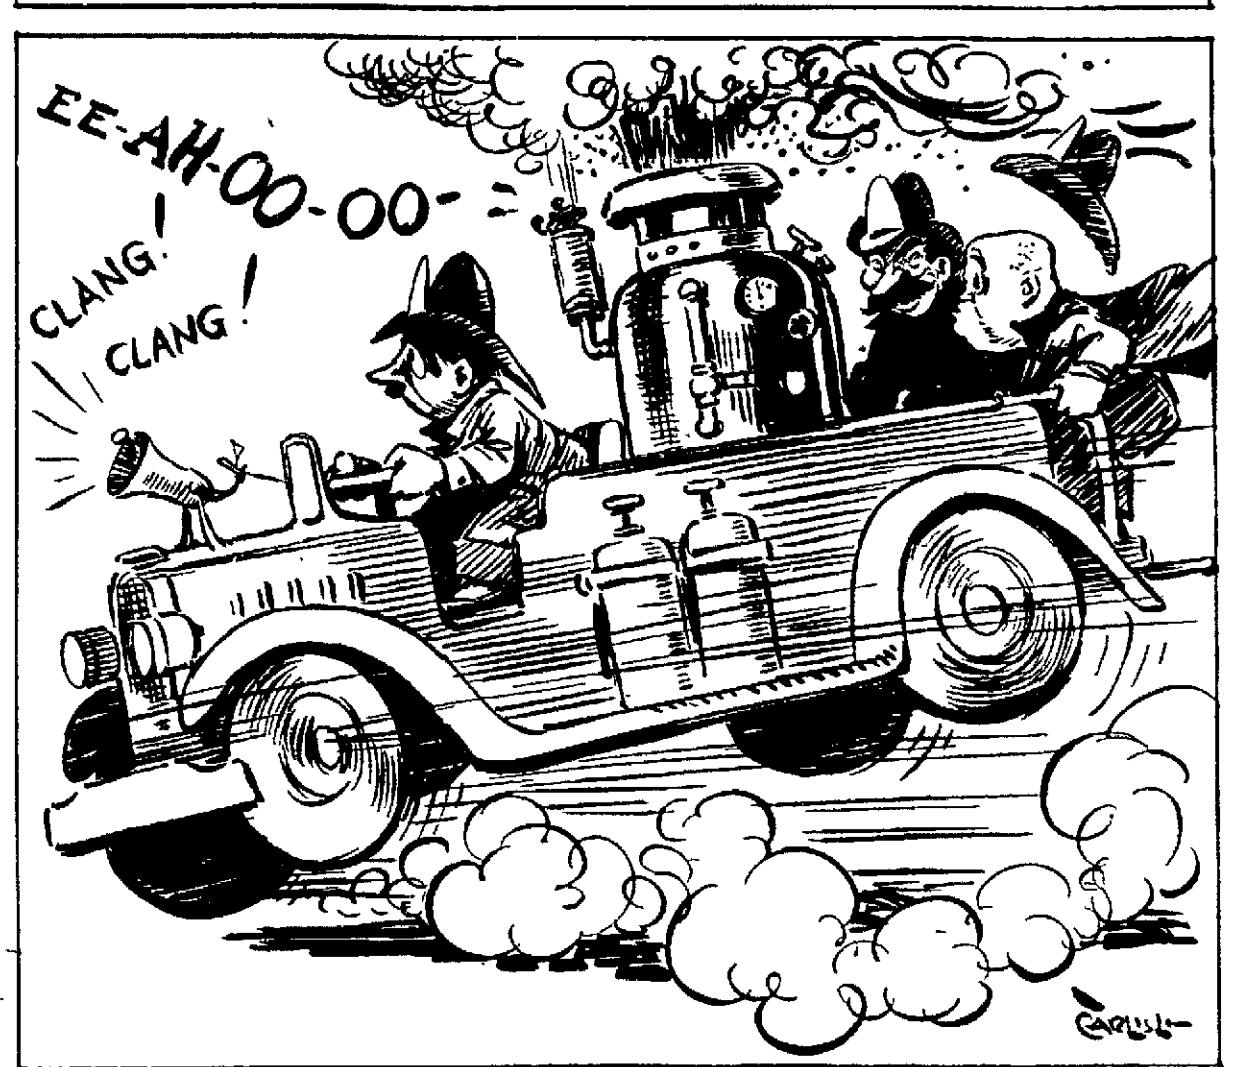

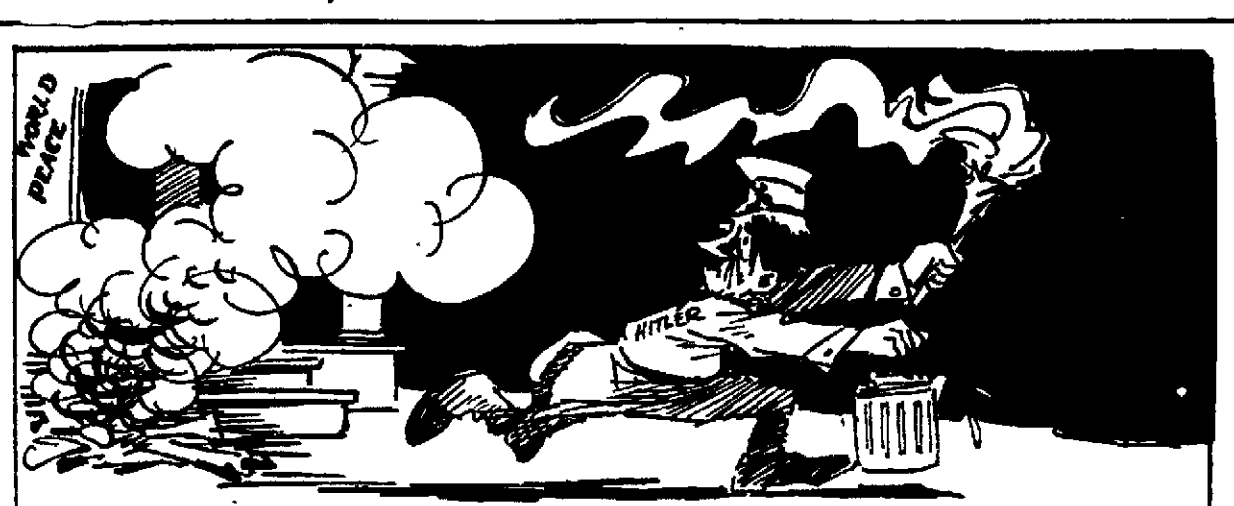

WAA MYSTERY
Although there was considerable ado about it several months ago, there is now something of a mystery surrounding the disposition of the problem posed by the Wisconsin Agricultural Authority.

The WAA, it will be recalled, bequeathed some debts to the administration when it was discovered last summer that it had overspent its appropriation. The last word of the tangle was the announcement by Governor Heil that he would assume the responsibility for the authority's obligations at a price—that the privately-incorporated organization dissolve.

MR. McMAHON
Until the actual announcement by Governor Heil of the appointment of his legal secretary, Elmer Barlow, to the new post of tax commissioner, there was a strong feeling in the capitol that Heil would resubmit the name of Stephen J. McMahon.

Heil withdrew McMahon's nomination.

ALL RIGHT, NOW LET'S WATCH 'EM PUT THE FIRE OUT

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—A citizen who reads these paragraphs expresses surprise that the state administration should be seeking new taxes.

He lists the state taxes now in the statutes, and their yields, and wonders why the legislature and the governor need more at this time.

Probably that problem has bothered other persons who have not studied state affairs closely.

The explanation is that many years ago the state government started the practice of dividing the proceeds of its tax laws with its local subdivisions, school districts, towns, villages, cities and counties. As a result the state government now enjoys only a part, sometimes the smallest part, of the proceeds of such taxes as the liquor tax, the income tax, the inheritance tax, utility taxes gasoline and automobile taxes, and others.

Moreover, as the years passed successive administrations divided portions of the share which remained to the state with the local subdivisions.

NUTRITION AND IMMUNITY

There is no scientific evidence that vitamin A is of any greater importance in maintaining normal immunity or freedom from illness or in preventing any specific infectious disease than is any other vitamin or any essential nutritive element. If the intake of vitamin A is less than the body requires then the body will be that much less capable of maintaining normal immunity (we do not speak of "resistance" because no one knows what that may be, other than immunity as this is recognized and to a degree measured scientifically). But the same thing may be said of the intake of any other vitamin or of calcium or phosphorus or iron or iodine or sulphur or protein or fat or starch.

The specific part played by vitamin A in building or maintaining immunity consists in keeping the mucous membranes throughout the body in normal condition. Absence or insufficient intake of A, in animal or man, manifests itself by formation of "stratified keratinizing epithelium" instead of the normal soft columnar epithelium lining the respiratory, alimentary, urinary and genital tracts, the eyelids, etc. Mucous membranes that sort is incapable and more readily susceptible to penetration or invasion by bacteria. Restore vitamin A to the diet and, if the degeneration has not progressed too far, the epithelium of the mucous membranes will recover its normal condition, and the individual will again have the protection of this "first line of defense" against infection.

CITY HALL AND COURTHOUSE

Editor Post-Crescent—After more than half a century of residence in our City, I stepped into the new city hall for the first time I was astonished to find what could be done to an old building with a minimum of expense.

Our city apparently has provided the city officials with commodious, roomy, clean and sanitary quarters where the business of our citizens can be transacted in a decent wholesome manner. We can commend our mayor and council for this accomplishment which is a credit to our city.

From the city hall it was necessary to visit the county court house (something which is rarely done) after creditors had filed about $20,000 worth of judgments against his prospective state salary. McMahon's friends worked rapidly, produced testimonials that the debts were unavoidable results of business reverses, and even brought forth a statement by the judge who had allowed the judgments endorsing McMahon's appointment.

Thus the selection of Barlow, who was originally believed to be slated for the board of administrative review, was somewhat of a surprise Tuesday when the senate received it.

stone or bladder stone in some cases, I do not know. In animal experiments kidney stone may be produced by a diet lacking vitamin A, and the stones so produced may later disappear when vitamin A is restored to the diet. Whether this observation applies to kidney or bladder stone in human beings is a question. Here again, no possible harm can be done by the therapeutic test in any case—the patient must take at least 100,000 better 200,000 units of vitamin A daily, preferably natural vitamin A (four or eight capsules daily) over a period of at least two months, to determine whether any improvement is brought about.

Some good oculists now prescribe vitamin A as an adjunct in the treatment of numerous eye troubles which may depend at least in part upon nutritional deficiency. Patients in the early stage of cataract frequently report marked improvement in vision when they have taken an optimal ration of A for some time, but whether that is coincidental with the course of cataract or possibly due to the vitamin A, we may know five years hence.

What a contrast! Here is a building housing many times more officers and employees. It is dark, dingy and smelly. The floors in the corridor are abundant with worn and loose tile. The officers are compelled to serve the public in cramped quarters, just dark, airless cubby holes crowded with human beings. I was so impressed with the difference that I made it a point to look over the whole layout. I found every corner in use, many girls being compelled to work under artificial light in corridors that had no ventilation. I couldn't help but wonder what would happen to the 30 odd girls working on the third floor in case of fire. I looked for fire escapes but found none anywhere in the building. The only escape would be through the east and west stairways and these in case of fire would serve as chimneys blocking off all chance of getting down. It made me wonder what the building inspectors department of the Wisconsin Industrial commission thought of a situation like this and what explanation would be offered in case a half a hundred humans burned up in this trap.

The officials in charge have no doubt, done everything possible to provide space for the people that work in this building, with the set-up they have to work with. Without going into details, I found the county records crammed into overcrowded vaults and I speculated on the method of finding anything in case it was necessary to unearth it. The sanitary provisions around the place were dark and unwholesome.

It occurred to me that if our city could take an old school house and make a city hall of it such as we now have our County authorities could acquire the vacated Appleton high school at North and Oneida streets and if they would avail themselves of the same persons who planned the City Hall or some other modern architect the county could without further ado and at an expense now available in the Court House Trust Fund provide decent housing for its employees and make it possible for the public to transact its business under proper sanitary and modern circumstances and conditions and not embarrass this county by maintaining on out-moded fire trap.

Anyone interested should visit these two buildings and draw their own conclusions.

Future Family Relationships Depend on Attitude of Parent

BY ANGELO PATRI
"What's the good of having children, slaving for them all your life, only to have them go away as soon as they are able, and forget all about you?"

Maybe the answer to that question lies in the use of the words "good" and "slaving." Most parents have children because they wish to have them for their own pleasure. Of course the children had nothing to say about it. Once the children arrive they are quite at the disposal of their parents, who can treat them so as to attach them with everlasting affection, or drive them away to live their lives apart. I think it is all in the attitude the parents take toward the children.

This question begins with "What is the good?" The parent expected to be repaid in some way by the children. Perhaps it was the love of the children that was expected. The fact that it was expected indicates that it was demanded, for such expectation is always made known to the children. Did you ever hear of love that was born that flourished and grew strong, at demand? Nobody has ever yet seen nor felt that love.

And that other word, "slaving," stands for trouble in any home where it is breathed. When a parent brings a child into the world she must expect to take care of him for many years, for a child is helpless beyond all other creatures of this earth. It takes years of hard work, years of anxiety and patience and even suffering and sacrifice to rear a child. But his presence in the home was ordained by his parents. It is scarcely fair then to speak of the care given the child as "slavery."

Nobody can hope to keep his feelings secret from his family and friends. What one thing speaks as clearly as what one says, is a parent's feelings for his child. If a parent feels his service to his child is slavery, and if he is expecting a return "good" for his service, the child knows it and, being a human child, resents it. Resentment, grudging and selfishness never create love. Nor do they inspire gratitude.

Maybe a story of a friend of mine told me will explain what I am trying to say. I met him unexpectedly, in a part of town out of his usual way. He hailed me, and to gether we rode toward home in his car.

"We've just moved home into a more comfortable apartment. She needed more sunshine and quiet than she had downtown, so Matt took this place. Mother's close to ninety now, and brisk as a bee. Not many left of the old kind, like her."

"She brought us up, eleven of us, on the strength of her back, her arms in the washbowl. Father died, and there she was with the lot of us. She brought us all through—God bless her—and it's our turn now to show her we were worth it. And when you have eleven sons and daughters, all fighting to do something more for you, it's something. There's nothing like having to pull together to make you stick together. We're hoping she lives a hundred years. They wouldn't be long enough for us to tell her what's in our hearts to say."

Do you think that Mother Gallagher ever talked about what good the children ever would do her? Or about how she slaved for them? They were her life and her joy, her husband and her religion, her all. And they knew it. Now they are eager to have her know that they know it.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENT
Dear Mrs. Post: How is the marriage of an orphan bride announced in the newspapers? There are no relatives whose names she would want to use in connection with such an announcement.

Answer: The wording would be: Miss Mary Smith, daughter of the late John Henry Smith and the late Mrs. Smith, was married to Mr. Henry Lawson Brown, son of Mr. Professor and Mrs. Alven Brown of University Place (and where, and when).

Return a Present With Tact
Dear Mrs. Post: My daughter and I have been wondering if we have been guilty of a breach of etiquette. A young man from a very nice family has been very persistent in his attentions to my daughter. Last week was her birthday, and he came to the door and handed me a box to give her. When she opened the box she was very surprised to find a lovely jeweled bracelet. We talked it over, and I advised her to send it right back by a messenger boy. She did this, and hasn't

The bidding:
South West North East
1 no trump Pass 2 no trump Pass
3 no trump Pass 4 no trump Pass

"I was North and I realize that my raise of one no trump was highly questionable, perhaps worse, but I have great confidence in this particular partner and I didn't like to take him out to a minor suit. I hoped, of course, that he could use my clubs to great advantage and that he would be able to hold off the heart suit."

"West opened the seven of spades. Dummy's four was played and East fearing that his king would be smothered by the ace, and that declarer then would have a finessing position against the jack, played low. Declarer's ten spot won and the ace, king and jack of diamonds then were laid down. (As declarer afterward explained, he felt he could not afford to take out dummy's only sure entry, the club king for a possible fruitless diamond finesse. Events proved he was right.) West, on lead with the diamond queen, now shifted to the eight of clubs, his theory being, I suppose, that declarer must have a reason for failing to go after the club suit. Dummy's nine brought out East's Jack and the trick was taken by the ace. Declarer then crashed only one of his diamonds. He was not particularly anxious to make two tricks from dummy at this stage. His next play was to lead the spade five toward dummy. He strongly suspected the true condition of affairs in the spade suit and hoped that something might happen. It did! West, giving no thought to the possibility that his partner might have held out the spade king, climbed up with the spade ace and great was the fall thereon. East gave West a very dirty look as he played the king to this trick, and West gulped so hard that I thought he was going to play his Adam's apple to the next trick. He managed to restrain himself, however, and led another club. Declarer had nothing to lose by putting in the ten, but East won the queen for his side's third trick. On a heart return declarer now could claim the balance without a finesse. He put up the ace, cashed his remaining diamond, finessed up to the Q-9 of spades, and chucked one heart on the long spade and one on the club king, making in all four-odd."

"Perhaps the defense was not all it should have been, but you must admit that declarer's play was very pretty."
J. M., Philadelphia.
Undeniably, declarer played the hand to the best advantage and, by that token, earned his success. The defense he encountered was extremely helpful to him, but I venture to say that most declarers would botch up the hand to such a degree that no defense, however weak, could save them.
It must not be thought that East's failure to put up the spade king on the first round was inexcusable. As a matter of fact, if declarer had had the spade ace, which East certainly had reason to fear, the ducking play might well have turned out favorably. The real culprit in this hand was not East, but West. At the point in the subsequent play where declarer led his spade five towards dummy West should not have hopped up with the ace! He should have given serious consideration to the possibility that East, and not declarer, had the spade king. As a matter of fact, if declarer had had it, he probably would have laid it down to avoid blocking dummy's spade suit. At any rate, there was very little chance that West could lose his spade ace by a holdup play, whereas there was a decided chance that if he put it up he might smother his own partner's king.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH ME?

You always have to pay a price for popularity, but be sure you don't get overcharged. Remember, too, that you aren't limited to dollars and cents in buying friends and social good will.

Case 0-164: Gerald T., aged 20, has a social inferiority complex.
"I grew up with my grandparents," he confessed, "and never had a date till I came to college."

"Because I was sort of spindly and not used to rough playing, I got into few games with other boys. Sometimes they called me sissy, which hurt me greatly, but I wasn't courageous enough to fight."

"Now I want to change things. But I go broke about the middle of each month, because I spend my money on the other fellows. Or they'll come to me for a loan of anywhere from $5 to $10 and I always give it to them."

"Sometimes I wish I could refuse, as last week when I lent my last dollar and had to call off a date with my girl friend. Dr. Crane, why do I find it so difficult to refuse when they ask me for money?"

Beauty and You

Fascinating BRENDA JOYCE, one of Hollywood's young lovelies, is a man's ideal dream girl! Beauty, poise, charming manners and a beautiful voice.

Saturdays during October are pretty important the country through. America's own great sport, football, calls many of us out into the fresh air to watch two teams tussle with each other. Sunset brings the gay hours of tea or cocktail parties followed by dancing. Every American beauty wants to shine this month, deep in her heart she yearns to be a football belle!

As competition is keen, girls, you must keep up on your toes. That means you must dress appropriately and act charming! You must use all the engaging feminine devices you know of, to keep the laurels on your head.
You and I know that many a girl is popular as the deuce around the dormitory or in the office. But when she gets out to a football game with a group she falls flat! Why is it?

Part of the trouble is her self-consciousness. The rest of it is her past indifference to the details of grooming and the acquisition of charm. At school or in the office she didn't seem to need either. Her good nature and comradery carried her along. But out in the social life—in keen competition with girls who strive to be beautiful and charming—she hasn't a chance to shine. Naturally she feels pretty badly about it, and you feel you shouldn't include her on the next date because she seemed to be so uncomfortable on the last one.

What You Should Do
Clothes, unfortunately, are pretty important, if you strive to be a belle. You needn't have scads of them, but you must have the right sort. Smart outdoor clothes and tricky hats are worn to games. Bright gay woolen suits and sport coats are most popular. But girls who are able to wrap themselves in mink or beaver, or other costly furs, do so. They may wear beneath them a casual but smart woolen, or an afternoon dress for the tea-dancing to follow. But the exterior is trickier, and gayer they can be the better. And each year finds the girls exploiting a new one!

My leaflet "Secrets of Charm" may help you to be a belle. If you request it enclose a self-addressed envelope stamped (3-cent). Write me care of this paper.

"A Lot Of Telling"
"Where is Philip?"
"In jail, ma'am."
"I beg your pardon?" Locke mocked.

"Say, you even got me mixed up!" The sheriff roared at his joke. Olivia said, "Mr. Callen isn't Mr. Callen," as though that explained it.

"He's a long-wanted jewel thief, a member of an international ring," Dr. MacDonald said.
Cecily said, "And I'm the Queen of the May, I suppose. Or, am I delirious?"

We realize that it is necessary to reciprocate occasionally in order to keep the scales balanced.
"We ought to invite the Browns, for they had us over for dinner last Thanksgiving, or Christmas, or whenever it was," we are wont to say.

Everything Has A Price
Some sentimentalists would have us believe that friendship and love "just happen." In this scientific age we know that nothing just happens. There is always a cause and a definite procedure or technique for obtaining the desired goals, whether these be happiness, a beautiful painting or a successful surgical operation.

Popularity is bought just as surely as you buy an automobile. It requires a price, and this cost involves being cordial and smiling at our companions, paying them sincere compliments, doing favors for them, applying the Golden Rule.

Besides, we must build up our own personalities so we are attractive and self-assured. If you want a psychological "Blueprint For Happiness" follow the instructions below.

Never Necessary for Wife to Forgive Philandering Husband

BY DOROTHY DIX
Dear Miss Dix—I am 26 years old. Have a lovely, kind and faithful 19-year-old wife whom I love and who adores me, and a fine little boy. But I have a desire to be a philandering husband for a while and feel that if I could have a few affairs with women that I would tire of them and come back and be a faithful husband. I have explained everything to my wife and she tells me to go ahead, but I know that it would just about break her heart. Do you think that wives should forgive infidelity in their husbands? Do you think my wife will?
S. N.

Answer:
The answer is "NO" to both questions. Certainly no wife is under any moral obligation to overlook the disloyalty of a husband who forsakes her for other women and who tears her heart to tatters with jealousy by lavishing upon them the time and attentions and money that belong to her. A man has no more right to break his marriage vows than a woman has to expect her husband to welcome her back with open arms when she strolls in off the primrose path.

Few husbands ever forgive an erring wife and I doubt if any wife in her heart ever forgives an unfaithful husband. Apparently many women condone their husbands' philandering, but when they seem to do so it is generally because they don't want to break up their homes for their children's sake, or because they have no way of supporting them, or because they have religious scruples against divorce.

Rarely is it because they have the justice nature that makes them still love and cling to the men who mistreat them.

But no matter what pretense of forgiving and forgetting the offense that has been committed against them that these women put up, in reality they never do forgive or forget. It isn't possible for them to do so.

No woman can trust again the man who has once betrayed her. No woman can ever forgive the humiliation her husband puts upon her when he publicly advertises that he is tired of her and she no longer has charm for him by running around with other women. No woman can ever idealize her husband again or respect him who she knows him to be a poor, weak, sensual creature, the victim of his own passions, without the strength to resist temptation. You can't drag love through the mire and ever have it come clean again. You can patch up a vase that has been shattered and make it so that you can stick a few flowers in it, but the cracks will be there, the beauty gone. And it is that way with the marriages in which wives ignore their husbands' sidestepping. The home is kept together. The husband and wife go out to parties together. But all that made the marriage beautiful and sweet and fine is gone.

There is always tension in the air. There is always a little contempt in the wife's eyes. There is always some of the bitterness that we feel toward those we have wronged in the husband's attitude toward his wife. For he knows he is a rotter and he knows she knows it, and that she is tired of putting up the bluff she does to have his face.

And, of course, in the end, when he gets tired of playing around with other women, when he wants love that isn't bought, when he wants somebody to nurse him and take care of him after the cuties he has spent his money on have gotten fed up on him, he does return to his wife. But there is no rejoicing in her heart, no slaying of the fatted calf for the prodigal's return. Her love has starved to death long ago. She is tired and disillusioned, and the most she has to give him is tolerance.

That is the price of philandering. Mr. S. N. Consider if you think it worth while to give up your wife's love and faith in you for a few adventures on the primrose path. Don't delude yourself for a minute by thinking you can do it and come back to your home as it is now. The fire will be out on the hearthstone and no power of yours will ever kindle it again. For women do not forgive. And they never forget.

Don't Dump Your Temper at Home
Dear Dorothy Dix—Did it ever occur to you that the jealousy of wives may be our heart hunger for some of the pleasant companionship that our husbands shower on the women they work with and never give the woman who stays at home looking after them and their children and their digestions? My husband is hale fellow well met in his place of business, but sheds his joking and pleasantness at the door with his hat and coat. I am told that abroad he is noted for being a witty talker, but he confines his conversation at home to expenses and bills, and if I suggest that he bring some of his business charm to bear on his family he accuses me of being catty.

SO-CALLED JEALOUS WIFE.
There is no doubt that many a man regards his home as a place where he can dump all the temper and nerves that he has to suppress during business hours, and that he vents on his wife and children all the irritation and the fury that he has not dared to expend upon cantankerous clients and insolent bosses.

This is pretty hard on the Little Woman and the kids, but psychiatrists tell us that home is a safety vent that keeps many a man from blowing up and bursting; that Papa relaxes himself by quarreling with Mamma and kicking the cat and spanking the baby and sending little Johnny supperless to bed, and so is enabled to go back to work the next day and keep the family pot boiling.

So that's that. But it is no wonder that wives are jealous of these amiable and cheerful gentlemen whom they never see at home. They would be more than human if they didn't get a little green-eyed when they know how polite and gallant their husbands are to other women and how rude they are to them. And they can't help resenting how suave and diplomatically they handle their stenographers, who can give notice and quit, and how brusque they are in their treatment of the women who work for them for board and clothes, but who have to stick to their jobs.

If husbands would only try to sell themselves to their wives as much as they do to their customers and clients it would cure a lot of the faults in wives of which men complain.

Gloria said, "If you'll all keep quiet I'll try to make it plain. Cecily, Philip Callen is really Slick Rawlins. Only he's really..."
Gloria broke down, laughing. She reached across Cecily's cot and clutched Cecily's good hand. "This is Philip Callen, you little liar! Your fiancé!"

Cecily sat up.
"No, she isn't a liar, Miss Watts. She is my fiancée, aren't you, darling?"

"In that case," Olivia pronounced, wrapping her quilt about her, "I suggest that you go and have a look at the remnants of my house and allow Cecily's fiancée to tell her the story himself."

"Don't forget your jewels, Mother," Gloria said, picking up the leather case that had been lying on the table. "You ought to have learned a lesson tonight."

American Indian Lore Believe Wisconsin Was Seat Of Indian Copper Industry

BY PHEBE JEWELL NICHOLS
(Mrs. Angus F. Lockwood)

Civilization and industry have evaluated the copper sources of Minnesota, Michigan, and Wisconsin and have verified the intimations and hopes of Champlain and other early explorers that this metal of which the first trading Indians spoke to them with awe and mystery was and is in great abundance in the Lake Superior region. Archeologists, working always to determine the facts of prehistoric living, have been occupied for many years in discovering the extent of Indian knowledge of copper from mining to working it into implements. There exists no record to establish what the Indians knew about copper. As in the case of stone implements, scientists have experimented until they could determine that they had discovered how the Indians did things with copper.

Let us visualize for a moment the shape of Lake Superior. Its easternmost point is at Sault Ste. Marie, from which the shore line goes northwesterly around to Port Arthur and Fort William near which is Isle Royale. Crossing the Canadian border into Minnesota, the shore line moves southwesterly with Duluth at its westernmost point and Superior just on the other side in Wisconsin from whence the curves northward to the Apostle Islands, then south along Chequamegon Bay to Ashland and crosses the Michigan line and moves northwesterly to Keweenaw Point, then abruptly south to L'Anse, then north and east to Marquette and back to the Sault. The two great aboriginal Indian copper workings have been found to be at Isle Royale and at Keweenaw Point. While Minnesota and Michigan were nearer the copper sources, it is in Wisconsin that the greatest number of Indian-made articles, that are artifacts of copper, have been found. Indeed, more Indian copper artifacts have been found in Wisconsin than in any other state in the union. There are on record at present over 20,000 specimens of Indian copper manufacture found in Wisconsin and produced from the mines of the Lake Superior region.

Nugget Sizes Vary
Copper was found in nuggets of all sizes and in the seams of copper-bearing rock. It is assumed that the Indians doing the mining took these sheets, a typical size being about 3-16 of an inch thick and 10 inches long by 8 wide, and the nuggets home to their village artisans who in turn worked them into ornaments and tools. Old men, like the Ancient Arrow Maker of the Hiawatha stories, were the implement makers, and to their village workshops were brought the materials for manufacture. At Indian village sites all along Green Bay have been found many copper chippings, definite evidence of copper workshops there. At Two Rivers, Sheboygan, Waupaca, and Green Lake especially large amounts of copper chips and other copper pieces have been found as proof of extensive copper manufacture in these parts. The distribution was also extensive. Findings indicate that native copper as well as the finished artifacts went in trade east, south, and west. Perhaps in this way Wisconsin Indians secured the Ivory-colored flint of Ohio, the obsidian of the Yellowstone, and the beautiful conch shells from the seashores, all of which in varying quantities have been found among Wisconsin Indian relics. Unmistakably, Wisconsin was the seat of the Indian copper industry the products of which passed through the avenues of trade to many and distant lands.

With the stone tools that the Indian coppersmith made, he formed the copper artifacts. He found early in his work that hammering on a piece of freshly mined copper made it crumble, so he experimented till he developed a practical method. The first step in this method is called annealing and consists of the alternate heating and dipping in water of the copper which made it tough and manageable. Then, hammering, grinding, cutting, and polishing, he produced the finished object, and by embossing and perforating he decorated it. Finding many objects made of sheet copper in Wisconsin brought up controversy as to whether the Indians produced these sheets or got them from Europe in trade. Chemical analysis showed that the Indian did not melt or temper copper.

Note Free Silver
The free silver found in the artifacts studied would not be seen if the copper had been tempered. Analysis showed the Indian-made sheets, to cite one instance, to contain 99.73 per cent copper, 34 per cent iron, and .023 per cent silver, while the European trade sheets showed the presence of bismuth, zinc, antimony, nickel, and arsenic and that they were obviously tempered, by annealing and hammering only, the Indian coppersmiths made sheet copper out of chunks and welded pieces upon one another and together.

Copper was used a great deal for decorating the commonest ornaments being beads. These were made by winding a thin strip of copper around a sort of spindle, the number of turns around regulating the size, and by drilling through solid pieces and hammering them into shape. Hammering and polishing made a handsome bead. A chain of copper beads, now famous among Indians, was discovered to be over eleven feet long and to contain over five hundred beads, each 1/4 inch in diameter. Innumerable bangles, rings, pendants, breast plates, bracelets, ear rings, and hair ornaments were made. From the copper breast plate forged as a medal of honor to the lovely bracelets and hair ornaments goes the story of Indian life and romance, if one cares to read it. Too numerous to mention is the detailed list of other copper artifacts ranging from spears and arrow points, through knives, adzes, and gouges, to fishhooks and harpoons. The Schumacher Collection of copper artifacts in the Neville Museum in Green Bay offers an exceptional opportunity for study, as do other

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, pain-sending, backache, sciatica, rheumatism, and other ailments caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day. If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may cause nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys, or kidneys. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. museum collections in Wisconsin and elsewhere. These collections throw much light upon the term 'fabricate' which means 'to form by art and labor,' for there is here the great beauty of meticulous workmanship.

Long Controversy
There has always been controversy as to which tribe of Indians occupied Wisconsin first, each tribe asserting its claim with considerable logic. Within the last number of years, scientists, notably W. C. McKern, associate curator of anthropology of the Milwaukee Public Museum, have made findings which point to a predominant Algonquian, not Sioulian, priority culture.

The land claimed by the Algonquian Menominees and recognized as theirs by the United States in the Treaty of 1831, have yielded the greatest number of copper workshops and copper implements of any region in the United States, showing these Indians to have been accomplished artisans as far centuries they fabricated their copper tools and ornaments.

An article, "Myths and Legends about Copper" by Charles E. Brown of the Wisconsin Historical Museum, published in the recent September number of the Wisconsin Archeologist, will be of much interest to those wishing to read further on this subject.

fortuitous night when a fell into your clutches . . . Cecily made a face at him and got kissed for her trouble. "Where was I? Oh, yes, that first night . . . I discovered that you seemed startled when I told you my real name. I sez, 'Phillip, this lady knows that bird and maybe we can find out something.' But I never expected to find out that you were engaged to him. Now I'm an honorable young man and I don't believe that a fellow should use another fellow's name when he asks a girl to marry him."

He paused to get her approbation.

"I'm glad I can count on you," she replied obligingly. "But I told you I really wasn't engaged to him, didn't I?"

"Yes, ma'am, and right then I got thinking. I looked that fellow over and I thought: what would he want to stick around a place like Darelea all summer for? It didn't look right. It was fishy enough to make me stick around and watch."

"Then Lady Whosis lost a valuable pin and Pushface was on the party. I thought I'd have a look at the records and see if he had any portraits hanging around the detective bureau. He had, Cecily! Front and side views and five thousand dollars reward from a syndicate of insurance companies."

"Why didn't you nab him then?" Cecily demanded, unconscious that she was falling into Locke's vernacular.

"It's been tried before, dear child. He's slick. The idea was to get the goods on him. You and Laura almost forced my hand. Then the night that the brute slugged her from behind . . ."

"Oh, my darling, is that what happened?"

"That's what happened. How it did, I don't know, but I picked her up in the road, unconscious, and she says to one knew that she was coming to my place."

"Heaven!"

"Wait a minute, Locke . . . I'm remembering something! That night I called Laura on the telephone and said that I wanted to see you. I called from the house and Phillip must have overheard me and been suspicious that I was suspicious. Go on."

"Then he probably slugged her thinking she was you. Next step was easy. Everybody knew about the concert, knew that it was a dressed-up affair, that this opera gang would be bringing a fortune in jewels. Any child would know that this was the night when a thief would pull his big coup."

"But Mrs. Goodale's necklace?"

"He didn't intend to do that. He just got itchy fingers and couldn't resist the temptation. Discretion got the better part of valor and he slipped it into your pocket."

"But what were you doing at the Yacht Club?"

"Having what's known as a look-see. I'd been away looking up some records and thought I'd find out if he was still around when I got back. I knew you'd start asking me questions, as usual, so I ducked."

Cecily's cheeks were pink with excitement. "Go on, dear, this is more exciting than any of it. What about tonight?"

"For awhile I was afraid I'd miss tonight and I got in a stew. . . Had to go to New York to finish a movie sale. By the way, we'll have ten thousand dollars to start married life on. Five for the sale of the book and five for the reward."

"Money! You talk of money when I'm expiring with curiosity!"

"Honey, I've been hanging around these grounds all evening waiting for you all to go to bed. Then I settled down cozily to a little meditation outside of Madame Darrell's room, knowing the jewels were in there and that friend Rawlins would make for there."

"What I didn't count on was that he was going to start a fire to cover up and grab the loot in the excitement. I thought he'd just grab and run. He gave the alarm himself and the fire was well under way when he gave it. Madame Darrell rushed out of her room. He rushed in! So did I. Well . . ."

"I know the rest," she said sweetly.

"You knocked him out and got him. . . well, I know that they have him. Then you came looking for me, didn't you?"

"Well, I went looking for you. I thought it was time I put you in your place."

"Flat on some stone steps?"

"Oh, sweet! I'm sorry. . . but"

I've got two arms and they both belong to you."

"You've got a black eye! And I suppose that belongs to me, too?"

"That's what they call a mouse, Cecily. And you're right, it belongs to you. Having only one eye, I'll have to see through yours."

Cecily swayed toward him. "Phillip Callen, no mere man could bear the brightness of the things I'm seeing through them now."

"Close them," he said, "and tell me what you see now." He kissed them gently and Cecily said, "Heaven!"

STOCKINGS

with this new hard-water suds!

A SERIOUS CAUSE of faded stockings now found to be the alkali in soap suds. So suds your stockings with Vel, marvelous new hard-water suds made by Colgate for fine fabrics. Vel is not a soap. Contains no alkali to fade the delicate color of stockings. Makes big suds in cold water, thus ideal for all fine fabrics.

See Vel make mountains of billowy suds, yet it leaves no ring around the bowl, showing that Vel also leaves no soap-scum in fabrics to dull the sheen and cause that "cottony" look.

Ideal for all fine fabrics because Vel washes things cleaner and newer looking. Thusther last longer and keep their silky luster.

NOW see stockings keep their delicate sheerness and fresh color, amazingly longer. See woolens and underwear regain bridle freshness and color! Colored prints sing with radiant sparkle!

Results are startling because science has found a way to make a wonderful new suds, called Vel, that contains no alkali to fade colors. And Vel can't form ruinous soap-scum to cause that "cottony" look in fine fabrics.

You can feel this slippery, slimy scum in soap suds. But these amazing new Vel suds feel soft and pure.

That's because Vel is not a soap. It's a special new hard-water suds perfected by Colgate. It makes as much as 5 times more suds than expensive soap flakes in hardest water. And it makes hardest water act soft as rainwater.

Moreover Vel makes abundant suds in cold water—so Vel is ideal for fine fabrics.

You can see why Vel is better than the finest soap flakes for fine fabrics, because Vel does not form a ring of soap-scum around the bowl. That proves Vel can't leave ruinous soap-scum in your stockings, underwear and woolens, to give them things that "cottony" look, and because Vel contains no alkali, it helps colors keep fresh much longer.

So easy on hands, too, because Vel is neutral—contains no acid, no alkali to irritate the skin.

It even outlasts pure soap 2 to 1 in hardest water! Buy Vel today at grocers. Made and guaranteed by Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company.

TRY VEL AND YOU'LL NEVER GO BACK TO SOAP AND WATER SOFTENERS!

Eau Pleine Reservoir Bill Signed by Heil

Madison — (P) A bill to facilitate completion of the Wisconsin Valley Improvement company's Little Eau Pleine reservoir in central Wisconsin was signed into law today by Governor Heil.

One major provision allows the company to establish a flowage upon acquiring title to 85 per cent of the land in the entire district, eliminating a former requirement that it obtain 85 per cent in each town affected.

The company, under a legislative grant of effect for more than 30 years, controls flowage on the Wisconsin river for flood control, navigation and power purposes and is permitted to assess tolls for its services.

The new law codifies and places in one statute various changes made since the enabling act was first passed. It was sponsored by senator Otto Mueller (R), Wausau.

Another bill signed permits motor carriers to pay state fees quarterly instead of annually.

New Trial Asked For Stephenson In Surprise Move

Attorney Contends Former Klan Leader Convicted Erroneously

Noblesville, Ind. — (P) — In a surprise move, Attorney Floyd Christian contended today D. C. Stephenson, former Ku Klux Klan grand dragon, had been erroneously convicted of murder in 1925 in connection with the death of Miss Madge Oberholzer of Indianapolis and presented to Circuit Judge Cassius M. Gentry "a written demand for trial."

Christian presented the demand as Stephenson was brought into court for a hearing on his writ of error coram nobis in which he contends that through intimidation he was prevented from testifying at the trial which resulted in his conviction and life sentence.

Second Degree Conviction

Christian's motion alleged Stephenson was convicted of murder in the second degree whereas legally he could, under the indictment against him, have been convicted or acquitted only of a first degree murder charge.

He demanded that the court place Stephenson on trial again on the indictment charging first degree murder.

Judge Gentry immediately heard arguments on the demand with Christian making the first statement.

Stephenson fingered his double chin nervously as Christian contended his conviction was "null and void" and "as if no verdict or sentence ever has been imposed on said defendant so that he has been held for 14 years in the custody of the state of Indiana" awaiting trial of the indictment returned.

The attorney alleged Stephenson, after his conviction, had been prevented from conferring with his lawyers and that he had been taken to prison and placed in solitary confinement.

Nazi U-Boat Lands Ship Survivors on Coast of Ireland

British Say Action Too Quick to Permit Internment

London — (P) — The British Press association said today a German submarine which landed 28 men from the torpedoed Greek steamer Diamantis on the Irish coast acted too quickly for guards of neutral Ireland to attempt internment of the U-boat.

The ship's crew was set ashore last evening near Dingle, County Kerry, some 15 miles from the spot where Sir Roger Casement, Irish nationalist, was landed by a German submarine in a World war anti-British plot.

First reports from Dublin said the submarine exchanged greetings with persons ashore while the Diamantis' survivors were ferried to land in a collapsible boat. The Diamantis, 4,990 tons, was sunk off Land's End Tuesday.

"Civic guards patrolling the coast saw the submarine on the surface and rushed to the spot," said the press association's account, "but they were too late to detain the German U-boat. While they were still some distance away the submarine moved away from the coast and started to submerge."

6 Taken to Hospital

"When the guards actually reached the scene of the landing the only evidence of the daring maneuver of the German U-boat commander was a stretch of frothy sea where the submarine had disappeared and a group of bewildered seamen were on the shore."

Six of the survivors were taken to Dingle hospital for treatment of injuries sustained in the torpedoing. The others said they had been aboard the U-boat for 36 hours and were treated courteously while it cruised off the Irish coast seeking a spot to put them ashore.

Sir Roger Casement and two companions were landed similarly the night of April 20, 1916. Their arrival was alleged to have been part of a plan for the Easter week Irish uprising. Sir Roger was executed in London.

President Eamon de Valera told the Irish senate last night the country would strengthen her neutrality by making nightly blackouts compulsory to prevent belligerent planes from using Ireland's lights as guideposts.

British war aims on the eve of the Irish senate last night the country would strengthen her neutrality by making nightly blackouts compulsory to prevent belligerent planes from using Ireland's lights as guideposts.

Hitler were reiterated by Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax in the house of lords last night.

He said that while Britain was willing to examine any proposals to end hostilities "we shall measure them against the principles for which we have taken up arms."

Attempts of Communists to Unstink Themselves Futile

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER
New York—I have never been able to figure out why persons who have denounced fascism and nazism but have openly proclaimed a resolve never to say a word against communism, holding it to be the greatest experiment ever made for human betterment, should resent being called communists. If I thought communism was the greatest experiment ever made for human betterment I would not only join the communist party but insist on being known as a communist.

I would refuse to be carried on the secret rolls of the party and would scorn the role of fellow-traveler and the ambiguity and stealth which are self-imposed on any person who attempts to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. If such were my considered and avowed belief I would seem it no slander to be called a member of the party.

But, of course, if I did believe in communism I would necessarily believe also in duplicity, treachery and dissimulation for these are not faults but virtues—in fact, required traits—and that would be a complication. It is impossible for any person who is not qualified by character to be a communist or a fascist or a nazi to put himself in the position of a confirmed believer and say what he would do if he were a communist, fascist or nazi. It is like trying to say what one would do if one were insane.

But those who are not believers in any of these isms often face the problem of dealing fairly with individuals who have indorsed communism and yet pose as martyrs and decry red-baiting when they are taken at their word and regarded as communists.

Men of honest mentality believe that they themselves would proclaim their membership if they approved of communism, forgetting that if they did so believe they would no longer value honesty. They see no wrong or harm but rather a polite acknowledgment in giving the bold full credit for beliefs which he has frankly stated, but often discover, to their puzzlement, that this mere acknowledgment is resented as an accusation.

Difference Between Answers of Drunk, Bolo

If a man says, "I was drunk last night," and another says, "Oh, so you were drunk, eh?" the first says, "Boy, I'll say I was drunk."

But if a red says, "I regard communism as the greatest experiment ever made for human betterment," and another man says, "Oh, a communist are you?" The communist, with his weirdly erratic reasoning, sometimes replies, "Don't call me that, I'll sue you."

Of course, a certain approbrium goes with it, but that comes from within communism itself. The very word is a monster, like a cartoonist's dragon, reminding of treachery and cunning, of sneaky parliamentary manipulation in labor unions, of vast slaughters in the mysterious Russian land, of the suppression of human rights and conscience, of the counterfeit of the documents and money of this amiable and trusting nation by the government of soviet Russia and of connivance, even active participation, in such traitorous indecencies by communist leaders who are nominally Americans.

Can't Break Package in Communist Russia

All that is included is communism itself, and nobody who regards it as the greatest experiment ever made for human betterment is also allowed to break the package and select only a few attractive theories. They shoot men in Russia for attempting to break the package. You have to take the practices as well as the theories, and if you do accept or indorse communism the approbrium gets on you.

For work to be exemplified when they attempted to unstink themselves lately, because Stalin finally acknowledged openly the obvious identity of sovietism with Hitlerism. They seek to do this merely by renouncing Stalinism for that particular reason, but that isn't enough. They aren't renouncing communism but just one embarrassing act by the leader.

Council Approves Construction of 2nd Wading Pool

Petitions PWA to Build Additional $3,000 Project

Neenah — The city council approved the construction of a second wading pool at the swimming pool and recreation building project at a meeting last night when it adopted an amendatory application petitioning the public works administration for additional funds.

The wading pool, which will be 20 by 60 feet, will cost approximately $3,561.25 to build, but Mayor Edwin A. Kalfahs pointed out, its construction will not involve the city in any additional expense. The purpose of the pool is to provide a place for those boys and girls, who are too old to wade in the small children's pool and who are too small to swim in the Olympic pool, a place in which to learn to swim. The graduated depth of the pool will be from 18 inches to two feet.

The council also approved minor changes in construction at the PWA project, including building a 6-foot fence around the pool instead of a 3-foot fence as required in the specifications. Contract for the purchase of miscellaneous equipment, such as an inhalator, electric range, spray guns, first aid equipment and toilet room fixtures, were approved.

Submit Budget

The budget for the board of vocational and adult education was submitted to the council. The amount of the budget for the period from Jan. 1, 1940 to Dec. 31, 1940, was $23,500, but the city will have to raise through taxation only $14,880, for there was a balance of $1,500 from last year, and there will be $4,032 from state aid, $2,380 from federal aid and $709 from other receipts.

Alderman Edward C. Schultz, chairman of the finance committee, reported that the city incurred $84 accounts amounting to $24,207.76 last month. The larger bills included hydrant rental and water, $5,131.74, concrete mix, $3,926.01, swimming pool, $3,327.70, poor relief, $1,784.58 and street lighting, $1,326.59.

Justices of the peace reports submitted showed that fines and fees collected in Justice Gaylord C. Loehning's court last month totaled $60.71, and by Justice Elmer H. Radtke $127.35.

The council was informed in a communication from officials of the Wisconsin Michigan Power company that an inspection of Neenah's street lighting system is being made. The inspection will include cleaning of globes and bulbs and replacing bulbs which have been discolored by burning or insects. A request for the inspection was made at the last meeting of the council by Alderman Carl Loehning.

No Vandenberg-for-President Unit in Wisconsin Authorized

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau

Oshkosh — Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan senator, has not given approval to any group in this state to announce itself as an authorized Vandenberg-for-president unit, according to Chester D. Shepard, Menasha, chairman of the sixth district Republican club.

Returning Tuesday afternoon from a business trip east, Shepard said that he had a brief interview with the Michigan senator. Senator Vandenberg in the conversation with Shepard reiterated his stand on the matter of presidential nomination.

"The senator made it clear to me that he has no intentions of declaring himself as a candidate for the nomination," Shepard said. "His only immediate desire is to make plans for his campaign next year to return to Washington as a member of the United States senate. However, he did say that, if he were nominated for the presidency, he would accept it."

saying: "Of course every one knows how I stand on the repeal of the embargo, there is no need to mention further that I strongly oppose it. There is one thing about the present congress that must not be overlooked. Although it appears that both parties have split into separate factions, if and when a real crisis appears on the horizon, I'm positive that there will be a unity of purpose, and that is to keep us out of the war."

The sixth district chairman commented on the sentiment of the general public in the east in regard to war.

"There seems to be a direct feeling of opposition to any new act, any new change in existing laws and legislation which might, either directly or indirectly, bring this nation into war," Shepard related.

"While I was waiting to see Congressman Joseph Martin, house minority leader, a working man, belonging to a trade union which Martin has fought openly many times, asked to see Martin. When he was presented to the congressman the laborer pleaded with Martin to allow the present neutrality bill to stand. Martin asked the man why, in view of the light that he belonged to an organized group that was strongly in sympathy with the present administration and its policies, this man favored keeping a bill which the New Deal group wanted changed. The man replied that he had two sons he did not want sacrificed. This illustrates how, all through the east this same feeling is prevalent."

Shepard said that the Massachusetts congressmen had words of praise for Frank E. Keefe, representative of the sixth district.

"Martin called Keefe one of the most promising congressmen to come to Washington in recent years. He spoke highly of Keefe's conscientious work in the house and added that voters of the sixth district should be proud of their representative," Shepard concluded.

Council Sells Old City Stone Quarry To Herman Reddin

Neenah — The city council sold Herman Reddin, Neenah building contractor, a hole in the ground for $25 at its meeting last night at the city hall.

The hole in the ground, however, is the abandoned city stone quarry off Fairview avenue. Mr. Reddin explained to the council that he has six lots on Fairview avenue, one of which is 125 feet deep while the others are 60 feet, and the rears of the short lots abut on the edge of the quarry. The contractor, who said he wants to build homes on the lots, asked the council for 65 feet of the quarry, pointing out that the quarry is of no future value to the city and that if he fills in the 65-foot plots, he can erect new dwellings.

When Mayor Edwin A. Kalfahs questioned the legality of conveying the land as an outright gift, the contractor offered $25. The council voted to sell him the space providing it is legal, and City Attorney John W. O'Leary was instructed to investigate.

Neenah Council to Probe Hazards on Wisconsin Avenue

Alderman Charges Excessive Speeding on Thoroughfare

Neenah—Traffic problems, embodied in alleged speeding on E. Wisconsin avenue, dangerous hazards to pedestrians because of U-turns on Wisconsin avenue intersections and driving business away from Neenah by violations of parking limits on Wisconsin avenue, were revived at a meeting of the city council last night at the city hall.

Alderman Robert Martens charged that motorists were traveling 60 and 70 miles an hour on E. Wisconsin avenue, and when Mayor Edwin A. Kalfahs told the alderman he doubted it, the alderman said:

"I've stood in front of the Masonic temple and clocked cars traveling east and they went down E. Wisconsin avenue in four seconds and it's nearly a mile."

Alderman Martens said he wanted to take the vote of the council as to the prohibition of U-turns on Wisconsin avenue intersections, and his motion to instruct City Attorney John W. O'Leary to draw an ordinance prohibiting U-turns on Wisconsin avenue from the Chicago and North Western tracks to the Bergstrom Paper company was carried. There was only one opposing vote.

Mayor Kalfahs attempted to discourage passage of the motion, contending that it should come from the committee on traffic and safety following a thorough study and investigation.

Alderman Knud Larsen revived charges of overtime parking on the main thoroughfare, and his motion to instruct the police department to enforce the parking ordinance, including double parking on Wisconsin avenue was carried.

Alderman Larsen refused to withdraw his motion when Alderman Carl Loehning and John Heigl requested investigation of the time limits, pointing out the disparity between the limits on Commercial street and Wisconsin avenue. The time limit on the former is 45 minutes, while on the latter it is 2 hours on the avenue. Alderman Heigl's motion instructing the traffic and safety committee to investigate the problem and submit a solution for a uniform parking ordinance throughout the city then was carried.

Alderman Heigl also suggested that there should be enforcement of the ordinance prohibiting parking on the wrong side of the street. He contended that the police department discourage this type of traffic violation through publicity as well as arrests if necessary.

High Crowned Streets

Another matter which has been thoroughly discussed at council meetings, cutting down of high crowned streets, was a major as well as controversial high spot during the meeting. A motion to cut down the high crown on the west end of Jackson street at city expense was carried following a heated discussion between Alderman Andersen and Loehning. Alderman Loehning contended that if that work is done at city expense all of this type of work in the city should be done that way, while Alderman Andersen said that these people have been paying taxes for years but have received no improvements, while, on the other hand, the city has spent lots of money improving sections of the city which were cow pastures. Mayor Kalfahs contended that if the property owners on the west end of Jackson street wanted the work done they should follow the proper procedure of submitting a petition.

The discussion got underway when Alderman Loehning informed the council that the petition for regrading Ellen street wouldn't be acted upon because it was too late in the fall, but to remedy the flood condition caused by the lack of proper drainage on the street, a 6-inch gutter should be dug along the street.

Regrading Plans

Alderman James Andersen's motion that the city should make public improvements should map out plans for regrading all high crowned streets in the city was carried.

A malt beverage and intoxicating liquor license was granted to Mrs. Florence Charron, 400 Main street, and operators' licenses were granted to William J. Dwyer and Earl Olson.

A resolution for the installation of sidewalks on Maple street from the street to Laudan boulevard was adopted and a petition for regrading and installation of storm sewers on Elm street was referred to the committee on streets, sidewalks and bridges. Another petition requesting installation of a street light on Maple street between Division street and Laudan boulevard was referred to the utilities committee, and petitions for street lights on E. Forest avenue between Ninth and Eleventh streets and Grant and Ninth streets were granted.

Berger's Throw Blamed by Scribes For Reds' Defeat

Enabled Gordon to Score Tying Run, Put Derringer in the Hole

BY GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—Those Yankees, possibly the greatest set of opportunists baseball has yet seen, are off and running again. Victorious over the scrapping Cincinnati Reds, 2 to 1, in yesterday's tense opening battle of the world series, they went into the second contest at Yankee Stadium today almost prohibitive favorites to wrap up their fourth straight world championship.

That was the game the Reds needed. Paul Derringer nearly pitched his stout heart out, and his National league teammates fought to the last gasp before a friendly crowd of over 58,000. But in the end the great pitching of Red Ruffing and the timely swatting of the Yankees proved a little too much.

Even if Bucky Walters, their second line pitcher, scores for the Reds today over the Yanks' Monte Pearson and squares the series, the Yankees still will have a big psychological edge as they go to Cincinnati to continue the clawing on Saturday.

Probing further into the opening thriller, though it was won by Bill Dickey's line single to center with Charlie Keller on third in the fourth, it was lost to the Reds when Wally Berger made the wrong throw-in from left field in the fifth frame, enabling Joe Gordon to score all the way from first on Babe Dahlgren's zipper down the line.

One Bad Throw That one uncertain throw undid the splendid six-hit, seven-strike-out hurling of Derringer and put the big right-hander in a spot where, when the Yankees finally struck again in the ninth, he was trying to fight off the winning run instead of the tying one. He couldn't do it, and suffered his first loss in 11 starts.

Berger's arm is acknowledged to be the weakest link on the whole Cincinnati chain, but it was not certain he was responsible for the weird play that enabled the Yanks to tie the score. Perhaps he only did as he was signaled. But here's what happened:

The Reds were ahead, 1 to 0, the result of a walk to Ival Goodman. His steal of second and Frank McCormick's hit through the infield—the 129th run of the year—driven across by the first baseman, Derringer was wheeling them through in great style. In four innings he had given the batters only two hits and had whiffed four.

So, with one out in the fifth, Gordon lined a single to left. The next batter, Dahlgren, cracked one over the third bag that Bill Werber just failed to spear. It went on to the board and Berger fielded it smartly as Gordon tore between second and third. Then Berger easily winged the peller toward second, apparently hoping maybe to nab Dahlgren there.

Art Fletcher, coaching for the Yanks at third, saw instantly the Reds hadn't arranged for a "cut-off" play, as he said later, and he waved the fleet Gordon on home. Linus Frey took Berger's heave, and, apparently flustered at Gordon's daring, made a high peg to Ernie Lombardi at the plate as the Yankee slid into the pan.

The Reds, in the dressing room later, admitted individually they felt that was the lapse that cost them the struggle. One of them said: "If Paul had gone into that ninth with a one-run lead, they would never have caught him."

As it was, Paul went into the ninth looking fairly secure. In the three previous frames he had set the Yanks down in order and at one point had struck out three of them in a row. His sweeping curves appeared to have the champions baffled, just as Ruffing's terrific fast ball and change of pace had throttled the Reds for five innings.

Keller Hiss One Red Rolfe, first Yank up in the ninth, smashed one over first that McCormick fumbled but came up with in time to win a close decision. Keller, the rookie from Newark, then caught hold of one that went a mile high toward the 407-foot sign in right-center.

Goodman went after it from right, and so did Harry Craft from center. Both, playing in an unfamiliar park, appeared to be bothered by the possibility of crashing into the wall. They looked at the ball, then at the wall, as they sprinted desperately.

Goodman just reached it. At arm's length, the ball hit his glove and bounced off, and Keller easily reached third. It was scored a triple, though a lot of Yankee partisans felt that Joe DiMaggio would have had it in his pocket, being familiar with the park.

Derringer then purposely passed DiMaggio to set up a possible double play. Why he didn't also pass Dickey while he was about it, thus setting up a force play at home, had not been explained at this hour. For Dickey pumped a clean single into center that Craft fumbled and didn't even bother to recover, because Keller long since was across the plate and the crowd was leaving.

YANKS BEAT REDS, 2 TO 1, IN FIRST SERIES GAME

A triple by Charlie Keller and a single by Bill Dickey in the ninth inning gave the New York Yankees a 2 to 1 margin of victory over the Cincinnati Reds in the first game of the World Series in New York. Keller is shown here clinging fast to third base after his triple, while Bill Werber, Reds' third baseman, whirls toward him. The umpire is Babe Pinelli.

Sophomores Add Zip to Workouts Of Badger Eleven

Lubnow of Waupun, Mil. of Dixon, Ill., Show In Backfield

MADISON (AP)—A couple of sophomores put more spark into the University of Wisconsin football drill yesterday than had been seen here this season as the Badgers took their final hard workout before the game with Texas Saturday.

Harold Lubnow, Waupun fullback, and Don Miller, Dixon, Ill., halfback, worked with the second and third teams and ran through a freshman eleven for several touchdowns.

Lubnow, who ran more like a halfback than a fullback, danced off several long gains and personally scored a touchdown. He had been withheld from body contact for the past two weeks because of a shoulder injury.

Miller tightened his hold on the second string right halfback spot by ripping off gains on smashes around end and through tackle. Orville Fisher, center, was on the first eleven in place of Jack Murray. The rest of the team was the same as Tuesday.

Johnny Doyle, senior alternate center, was not expected to play Saturday. A bad knee, suffered two weeks ago, failed to mend. The status of George Paskvan, fullback, also was doubtful. He played a short time in the Marquette game and aggravated a hand injury.

The first string had an hour's workout against tricky Texas double wing, reverse and pass plays, stopping all effectively. Only once did the yearlings elude varsity backs and the running plays were jammed down with minimum gains.

Acting head coach Bob Reagan announced Coach Harry Stuhldreier, who was called to Massillon, O., when his father died, would return today.

HE'LL NEVER KNOW

Raleigh, N. C. (AP)—Twenty-two inmates of central prison's "death row" are listening to the world series broadcasts, but one of them never may know whether the Yankees or the Reds win the championship.

He is Charles Fain, scheduled to be executed tomorrow for criminal assault and burglary.

Cincinnati Is Gloomy as Favorites Lose First Game

BY JOHN FREY
CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—Today's letter from the bend of the river is as full of it's as the weatherman in flood time. For while the New Yorkers, capn as any cow in our pastures, digest their victory, the people down in Vine street are sifting the first game of the world series for a fare-you-well looking up and the second game looking up.

"If Berger had thrown to third instead of 'f' fades into a sob as the next man tries, 'If they got Bucky Walters some runs 'if they hadn't hit into all them doubleplays' becomes 'if Lombardi can get ahead of one today.' But all the if's in the world won't restore that first game to what is firmly regarded here as the right side of the books. As much as Vine street wanted the opener, since 24 of the 35 world series have

St. Norbert Prepares To Meet Carroll Eleven

West De Pere — St. Norbert college football team, thoroughly chastened by its beating at the hands of St. John's University last week, will meet its only state rival next Monday night at Green Bay West Stadium. The opponent will be Carroll college of Waukesha.

Coach Mickey McCormick of St. Norbert has been working his squad hard in an effort to smooth out many of the bumps which appeared in the play of his team in its second contest. The Knights have not shown much offensively this season except for one brief spurt in the second quarter of the St. John's game, which netted them their only center in two contests played this season.

This year's Carroll-St. Norbert contest will be the fifth in as many years. St. Norbert won the first encounter in 1935, when Bob Toon ran back the opening kickoff for the only score of the day. Since that time the Pioneers have walked the St. Norbert eleven three times, last year by a 6 to 0 count. Indications are that Coach John Breen's squad will turn the trick again this year although the Knights may come up with their best ball game of the young season. This, at least, is the hope of the St. Norbert camp.

Packers to Play Chicago Cards in Milwaukee Sunday

Bays Won From Opponents in First Encounter at Green Bay

MILWAUKEE (AP)—When the Green Bay Packers and the Chicago Cardinals meet Sunday afternoon at the State Fair park stadium they will have behind them 1939 records in National Professional football league competition which favor the Packers offensively but give the Cardinals the edge from a defensive point of view.

In winning two games against one defeat so far this year the Packers have scored a total of 59 points, for an average of 19.66 points per game. The Cardinals, in winning one game and losing three this season, have scored but 36 points, for an average of 9 per game.

The Packers, however, have allowed their three opponents 53 points, while the Cards have held down their opponents points in four games to a 52 total, giving the Cardinals an average of but 13 points scored against them per game and the Packers a 17.66 average.

Bays Won, 14 to 10 In their one encounter this year, a game played a few weeks ago in Green Bay, the Packers came out on the right end of a 14 to 10 score. The game showed that both teams use the forward pass to good advantage. The Packers scored one touchdown on a long pass play and set up the other with a pass gain. The Cards passed to near the goal line, where they plunged it over, and scored on a field goal. Experienced observers found the Card line even or slightly stronger than the Packer forward wall on that occasion.

The league records of the two teams to date:
Green Bay Packers 14, Cardinals 10.
Packers 21, Bears 16.
Packers 24, Rams 27.
Chicago Cardinals 13, Lions 21.
Cardinals 10, Packers 14.
Cardinals 10, Pirates 0.
Cardinals 3, Lions 17.

President Carl Storck of the National Professional Football league has announced the following officials for the game here Sunday: Referee, Bobbie Cahn, Chicago; Umpire, M. J. Meyer, Ohio Wesleyan; head linesman, Irv Kupcinet, Ohio State; and field judge, Lafayette Abbott, Syracuse.

Ticket sales indicate that a large crowd will be on hand for the Packers 1939 Milwaukee debut. The tickets are on sale at Milwaukee newspaper offices and at various points in the city, while the Packer ticket office in Green Bay will be open up to 9 o'clock Saturday night.

a 558 series. H. Roeder registered 528 for the losers.

Two games went to St. Mary in a match with Stanford. Allen collected games of 211 and 201 for a 581 series. G. Gerrits mainstay the losers with games of 200 and 221 for a 601 series.

SERIES SIDELIGHTS

BY BILL WHITE
NEW YORK (AP)—The less serious side of the series: Some 58,000 saw the opener, but "Matilda and the kids" didn't. The Texan back of us explained to his neighbor, "I sent Matilda and the kids to the fair so junior and I could enjoy the game."

Jetting down names as fast as they passed: Postmaster General James A. Farley; Dorothy Arnold (Mrs. Joe Di Maggio); film funnyman Joe E. Brown; the greatest Yankee of 'em all, Babe Ruth; Clark (Old Fox) Griffith, hoping against hope the "dam Yankees" would lose; Bill Terry of the across-the-river Giants, dancer Bill Robinson and golfer Jimmy Thomson, another power hitter.

Although he had a lot of high powered competition, old Hank Gowdy, the Reds' coach, won the day's plaudits for confused costumes. When he pitched to the Reds in batting practice, he was equipped with aged shinguards and a first baseman's mitt.

Typical picture: The Yanks in their dugout sitting complacently back, taking things easy. The Reds on their feet hollering at their mates and heckling the Yanks, as nervous as a jitterbug at Faust.

The bleacherites had a busy day. They screamed at the antics of Al Schacht, clanged cowbells, fled a firecracker fusillade, hooted, howled and heckled. The box seat holders were quieter and seemed a trifle bored.

Giants took the lead in Zion Women's league with a 3-game victory over Packers during initial matches at Zion Lutheran alleys this week. The team counted top totals of 833 and 2,386. N. Henning paced the winners with a 526 series and 191 game while R. Ross had 536 and 193 for the losers.

Braves took the odd game from Bears as W. Kramer kegled 524. Tops for the losers was H. Buskie with a 196 game and 504 series.

Chicago — The Chicago Bears have the two biggest players in the National Football League. They are Jack Torrance, 285, former shot-putter and Louisiana State tackle, and George Musso, 270, one of the best guards in the pro circuit.

Missouri to Test Ohio State Squad For Big 10 Teams

Tom Harmon Gallops as Wolves Warm Up for Michigan State

COLUMBUS OHIO (AP)—Don Faurot's gridgers from the "show me" state may show the Big Ten just what it wants to know when the Missouri lads invade Columbus Saturday for Ohio State's opening football test of the year.

That is: A cue on how Francis Schmidt's 1939 edition of ambitious Buckeyes will stack up along the Big Ten title row. Tabbed among the favorites for five years in the pre season experting, the best the Buckeyes could do was to share the 1935 title with Minnesota.

This year many of the experts have placed Northwestern, Michigan, Purdue and the defending Minnesota Gophers on the "little spot" to the exclusion of the Buckeyes. Even so, only favorable reports continue to emanate from the Ohio campus where plenty of veterans, including Jimmy Langhurst, leading scorer of the conference last season, were preparing to make another title bid.

Heading the list of 21 Missouri letter winners figured to provide a real test of the buckeyes was big blond Paul Christman, ace passer and quarterback who scored three touchdowns last week in his team's 30-0 rout of Colorado.

On other Big Ten fronts yesterday Wisconsin, Northwestern and Illinois looked good in defensive maneuvers against plays of their next foes. Wisconsin takes on Texas and Northwestern meets Oklahoma Saturday. Illinois, however, does not face Southern California until next week.

Iowa, too, drilled on defense in workouts for Indiana, but Coach Eddie Anderson said he was dismayed at the Hawkeye demonstration. Indiana went through a long session at pass defense. The day marked the return of Cleo Maddox, the Hoosiers ace pass receiver who has been out with an injury.

Tom Harmon galloped for 90 and 35 yard touchdowns runs as Michigan scrimmaged for its Michigan State encounter. Purdue also held a long scrimmage with Coach Mal Elward on the lookout for additional reserve strength.

Bill Johnson, veteran end, regained his eligibility and joined in Minnesota's workout against Nebraska plays. Chicago continued efforts to add punch in its offensive in preparation for Wabash. Notre Dame regulars ran wild in a scrimmage tune-up for Georgia Tech.

St. Mary's End Around

By JIM CROWLEY, Fordham Coach

One of the top ranking inter-sectional games in the East for several years has been the Fordham-St. Mary's of California contest. And Slip Madigan's Gaels have often fooled the Rams with this sneaky end-around maneuver. The strength of the play lies in deception gained by lining up in right formation, faking to the weak side, and finally striking at the strong side. The ball goes to the left halfback, who spins and takes it to the fullback. Then, as the fullback charges to the left, the St. Mary's left end races past the left halfback and grabs the ball. St. Mary's right halfback blocks the left end and the Gaels' left guard joins the quarterback to run interference.

British Wrestler On Menasha Program

Menasha—Winnett Wallington Watson of London, Eng., will make his first appearance before Twin City wrestling fans next Wednesday night when the first professional wrestling show of the season is staged at S. A. Cook armory. The Englishman is reported to be a fast wrestler despite his 182 pounds. He also is a clean wrestler. He has just returned from England. His opponent Wednesday night will be Jerry Muler of Honolulu, Hawaii. The bout will be for two out of three falls with a 60 minute time limit. Wrestling shows will be held weekly this season, according to William Erickson, promoter. A wide variety of new grapplers will appear during the season. All six performers at the first show Wednesday night will be newcomers to S. A. Cook armory.

Lou Ambers Marries

Berkimer, N. Y.—(P)—Lou Ambers, world's lightweight boxing champion, married Margaret Ceilo, his childhood sweetheart, today in the presence of several hundred guests. Ambers planned a honeymoon through the mid-west before going into training for his Dec. 1 fight with Henry Armstrong for the latter's welterweight crown.

Grunters Will Return To Menasha Next Week

Menasha—Professional wrestling shows at S. A. Cook armory will be resumed on Wednesday night, Oct. 11, according to William Erickson, promoter. Shows this year will be run every week instead of every two weeks as in the past. Erickson has promised that many new performers will be engaged to appear at the armory. For the first show six grapplers who have not performed in the Twin Cities previously will be booked.

White Sox Beaten In City Series

Cubs Parade Pitchers but Grab 10 to 9 Verdict In 10 Frames

Chicago—(P)—The White Sox called on old Ted Lyons today to square their account with the Cubs in the second game of the city series. Behind the 39-year-old right-hander the south siders hoped to do better than in the series opener last night when the Cubs took a 10 to 9 decision in 10 innings to check the Sox' drive for a fifth straight city title. The Cubs summoned 40-year-old Charley Root to the mound for today's daylight game. A spirited crowd of 42,767 fans saw the extra-inning contest under the lights of Comiskey park last night. The championship will go to the winner of four out of seven games. The American leaguers twice came from behind despite a parade of five Cub pitchers and sailed into the ninth inning leading 9 to 7. At this point Rookie Bill Nicholson powered the home board to tie the score and the National league entry went on to triumph in the tenth on successive singles by Stan Hack, Billy Herman and Augie Galan.

America OUT-OF-DOORS

INVESTIGATING CANADIAN DUCK CONDITIONS

By Jimmy Robinson

RECENTLY we visited the western Canadian breeding areas for our annual duck survey. Our first stop was Winnipeg where we contacted A. G. Cunningham, Fish and Game Director of Manitoba, who told us conditions were slightly improved over last year which was the best year since 1930. Canada has had plenty of rain and the hatching was good in the spring. At Regina we got in touch with Ed Forsyth, Fish and Game Director of Saskatchewan, who painted us a rosy picture. Two years ago we drove over the barren lands of southern and central Saskatchewan, which had been known as the greatest breeding areas on the North American continent. Sloughs and pot holes were bone dry. Lake levels were low, and the ducks that had stopped in the early spring, enticed by small bodies of water, were trapped like mice in June and July when these waters dried up. Of course there were millions of ducks which were not fooled by these small bodies of water. These fled to the northern parts of the province to the larger lakes. The abundance in this non-agricultural area. Here they were afforded no protection from vermin and could not get their natural food. Their broods were smaller. Last year we found a different Saskatchewan. Heavy rains and snows had restored many of the pot holes and sloughs and rain continued and there was plenty of water. Commissioner Forsyth told me in July that the ducks had doubled over last year. He said that Buffalo and Johnston lakes, their two greatest natural breeding lakes, were close to normal. Even sloughs that were dry last year were filled with water and conditions were greatly improved. The Dominion government has done a wonderful work in this province. It has moved settlers from the devastated areas on to better lands. The government has taken over the vacated lands and made dams and is now irrigating huge tracts. Managers have been placed on each of fifteen tracts of 20,000 acres extent and patrol them. There is no hunting on this government land and it is now game refuge territory. Fish and Game Director W. H. Wallace of Alberta said, "Conditions have improved over last year, which was a good year, I predict an increase of 30 per cent in ducks and geese. Our Prairie chickens, Hungarian and ruffed grouse are showing a big increase."

Rochester Squares Little World Series

Rochester, N. Y. —(P)—A pair of rookies held today the answer to the little world series clash between Rochester of the International league and Louisville of the American association. With the teams tied at three games apiece in the annual minor league post-season classic, rival managers saw their veteran pitchers used up and called today upon the youngsters to win the deciding game. Billy Southworth, manager of the Rochester Red Wings, called upon young Johnny Grodzicki, while Bill Burwell placed his hopes on Woody Rich. The Wings squared the 21st annual junior classic last night with a 9 to 5 victory.

France Wars on 'Defeatist' Move To End Conflict

Armies Try to Improve Positions Against Possible Offensive

Paris—(AP)—France pressed a war against "defeatist propagandists" at home today while her armies in the east sought improved positions to thwart a possible German offensive.

In an official decree, apparently aimed at muzzling communist deputies who have been urging peace talks with the reich, Premier Daladier said that the deputies of the parliamentarianism they have enjoyed since parliament was summoned in extraordinary session Sept. 2. The communist party recently was abolished by government order, but has been reorganizing under a new name.

On the German front, reports indicated, French military leaders were strengthening lines in the hilly Saar and Palatinate sectors to meet the threat of a possible German assault.

Steady "nibbling" by French patrols also was reported to have resulted in gains in the Moselle river sector.

Semi-official military information said the French now were in full possession of the Borg forest in the pocket between the Moselle and Saar rivers near the border of Luxembourg.

Improve Position
These new gains, it was said, placed the French in better position to resist any Nazi attempt to outflank the Maginot defenses by advancing through Luxembourg—a possibility that French military men apparently were not ready to dismiss lightly.

There was no evidence of immediate spectacular military activity as the general staff appeared bent on keeping casualties to a minimum and using time as an ally to bring Germany down.

French sources, commenting on a communiqué last night announcing capture of a German merchant ship by a French submarine, said the prize was seized more than 1,100 miles at sea the submarine was one of the largest in the French army, it was said.

The press acclaimed the speech delivered yesterday before the foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies by Premier Daladier, who asserted France would fight until victorious in the war "that has been forced upon us."

The premier disclosed he had signed an agreement with Stefan Ousky, still recognized as Czech minister, for reconstitution of the Czech army in France, bringing new manpower to the allied cause.

BRITISH SHIPS SEEK OUT GERMAN MINE FIELDS

Great Britain's navy is fighting a defensive war daily, seeking out and exploding enemy mines which menace shipping for England. This picture, made from the deck of the mine sweeper "Seagull" shows part of the flotilla of British mine sweepers of the Halcyon class closing around a North Sea mine field.

Ammon Opposes Milk Control Legislation

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—(AP)—Ralph Ammon, director of the state department of agriculture and markets, declared he had no faith in a proposed milk control bill before the legislature in an address yesterday to delegates attending the 39th annual Wisconsin Buttermakers association convention.

"If the milk control bill is passed, the department will enforce it. If it is not passed we will all be better off," he asserted.

Ammon urged cooperation between the nation's dairy states in advertising and merchandising dairy products, and criticized the Wisconsin legislature which he charged was playing politics with a bill asking an appropriation to advertise dairying.

More Than 600 People At V. F. W. Production

The Harvey Pierre post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, packed more than 600 people into Castle hall on Lawrence street last night for a "fall varieties" show.

Among the entertainers to appear were the Radio Harvesters, Dixie Lee, the "sweetheart of the plains," and the Three Gents, a widely known tumbling act. Jack Kennedy, familiar midwest radio figure, was master of ceremonies.

avenue and Linwood avenue. It is proposed to install a pumping station at the corner of Linwood and Winnebago street and service the area with sewers; ultimately, properties west of Linwood will be equipped.

Alderman Grignon moved that a sewer system and pumping station be installed and that the board of public works assess damages.

Save It Will Be Expensive
Alderman Vander Heyden declared that the city would bear additional expense in laying sewers in this district. He proposed that the difference between the expense and the money received by the city on assessments be prorated among the property owners.

Alderman Bogan objected, asserting that those people have the same right as anyone else and should have to pay extra. It was established by Alfred Wickesberg, city engineer, that the sewer project would cost more than usual, one of the reasons being that there would be no property owners assessed on the other side of Wisconsin avenue, which is not within Appleton's boundaries.

Wickesberg said that the project, including the pumps, would cost about $8,000 and that assessments would be made to more than $2,000, leaving a balance of $6,000 that somehow would have to be dealt with.

"Where are you going to get the money," Mayor Goodland asked? "I believe in giving these people service, but you have built an awful lot of sewers in Appleton this year."

Alderman Thompson said he believed the council was proceeding too fast and that it should study the problem of financing first. Alderman Brautigan contended that the improvements, by increasing the tax assessments on the proper-

German Press and Officials Silent About Probable Tone Of Adolf Hitler's Address

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York—(AP)—By this time tomorrow we should have Herr Hitler's peace proposals and know whether he is prepared to make the far-reaching concessions necessary to interest the Anglo-French allies in ending the war.

All Germany was a-hush today in anticipation of the Nazi chief's Reichstag speech Friday on which may turn the entire European upheaval.

What der fuhrer might say was guarded as a deep secret. Officialdom said pointedly that speculation was "hazardous and a disservice to everyone." Newspapers announced the momentous speech in black headlines, but ran for cover when it came to hazarding a guess on its contents.

From the undercurrent, however, it was clear that German hopes of peace were confined to the possibility that Hitler might outline a basis on which hostilities could be ended. That is, it was thought possible he might pronounce some new Nazi attitude toward the allies.

In approaching the question of peace it is necessary not to get lost in a forest of high-sounding phrases and lose sight of what this war really is about. The making of peace isn't as easy as it might seem.

Fundamentally this is a conflict to determine who is boss of Europe.

And if that sounds like a crude way of putting it we might say that the Anglo-French allies claim Hitler is out for European domination by aggression, while der fuhrer maintains that England—the "policeman of Europe"—is trying to encircle Germany and garrote it physically, politically and economically.

French Premier Daladier yesterday put his finger on one of the greatest obstacles to peace when he said in a speech that "France does not want a truce between two aggressions."

Allies' Attitude
That was just another way of saying that the Anglo-French allies believe if they don't "crush Hitlerism" now they will have to do it later. They claim to think now is the appointed time.

In this connection, when I was in Warsaw just after the Czechoslovak crisis last fall, I had it emphasized to me that in 1933—the year Hitler came to power—the late Marshal Pilsudski added to his qualifications as a major prophet. The Poles claim by the way, that their hero was psychic.

Pilsudski is said to have urged France at that time to wage a "preventive" war against Germany, saying that the fight would have to come sometime anyway. The Polish records indicated that Paris refused.

Hitler has made it amply clear that he doesn't want war with the allies. The question now arises as to how far down he is prepared to climb to secure peace.

Senate Leaders to Consider Changes In Neutrality Bill

out of the way. Voting on amendments may be reached the middle of next week, he said.

In this connection, Senator Taft (R-Ohio), who advocates lifting the embargo, said he would offer an amendment to eliminate the section forbidding American ships to visit warring nations or their possessions. Instead he would have congress declare a war zone around Europe.

"I don't see why we should let ships go to Holland and Belgium and at the same time forbid them to go to Jamaica," Taft said. "And we would be getting away from presidential discretion."

(The administration bill gives the president power to name combat zones.)

As radio speeches continued last night to augment the senate floor debate, senators on both sides of the controversy criticized the resolution offered yesterday by Senator Johnson (D-Colo.) asking the president to take the initiative in urging other neutrals to work for an armistice in the European war.

Senator Clark (D-Mo.) said some might regard the proposal as pro-German "since Hitler is on top now and he would want an armistice now."

Administration leaders said the loss of one vote for repeal through Senator Logan's death had been made up by a decision of Senator Chavez (D-N. M.) to support the bill.

German Fuehrer Visits Warsaw

toward the western powers at war with Germany.

Long Address

But what Hitler intended to say remained a profound official secret and in official circles it was emphasized that speculation on his speech was "hazardous and a disservice to everyone."

The fuhrer is scheduled to speak for one and three-fourths hours. It was stated the rough draft of the speech had been completed but changes were possible up to the last minute.

Observers seeking a hint of what German policy may be knew that in quarters close to the foreign office there was dissatisfaction with the attitude of British Prime Minister Chamberlain and Lord Halifax his foreign secretary.

(In speeches in parliament, Chamberlain declared Tuesday that "mere assurances from Germany" were not enough for Britain to halt hostilities and Halifax said yesterday there was "no more perilous proceeding than to negotiate under the threat of force.")

Feel War Over In East

They knew also that from inspired sources have come repeated statements that "Germany is ready for either peace or war" and that the choice was up to Great Britain.

Nazis feel that with the fall of Warsaw, the war in the east was really over.

Although neither France nor French attitude toward the war was mentioned, newspapers prominently displayed an alleged order of the British admiralty to British merchant ships to "ram every German submarine."

The papers flatly blamed Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, for the order.

That Germany was not in a hurry to start operations in the west was indicated also by an army communique which said that "in the west there is almost complete calm except for minor artillery activity by the enemy."

The occupation of Warsaw virtually was completed but Germans acknowledged continued mopping up operations against still-resisting remnants of Poland's shattered army.

Democrats Merely Returning a Courtesy, Sen. Bolens Explains

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—Harry W. Bolens of Port Washington, dean of the Wisconsin state and usually holder of the whip hand in the legislative Democratic bloc, yesterday for the first time made a public statement of the reasons for the Democrats' alliance with the Republicans which put over a large part of the Heil administration's program this session.

The fusion in the legislature, and particularly in the senate, said Bolens, was a demonstration of gratitude for a similar courtesy shown by the Republicans in 1933 when the Schmedeman legislature needed a few extra votes to pass a Democratic legislative program.

Bolens remarks came during an exchange with Senator Michael F. Kresky, Green Bay Progressive, who has tangled often with the aged lake shore warrior who carried the Democratic state standard to defeat in 1938.

Kresky had repeated a charge made before by the Progressives that Democrats and Republicans came to an understanding during the revenue bill negotiations last week under which the Democrats would support the Heil gross income tax plan in return for a Republican promise to pass the single ballot bill which the Progressives maintain would end their continued career in state politics as an independent political party.

But when a Progressive filibuster killed the ballot bill, Kresky continued, Democrats bolted the administration's tax bill with the result that the revenue plan was killed and abandoned.

Bolens heatedly denied Kresky's allegations.

He said that he had supported the single ballot bill against the best in-

Embargo Repeal Would Bring War 'Pressure', Senator Says

Great Britain and France that the Nazis will begin to attack nations in this hemisphere."

"I do not believe any nation or group of nations can arise from the ashes of war's destruction to challenge the most powerful nation on the face of the globe," he added.

He said that this country could have an "invulnerable" hemisphere.

"No nation or group of nations can successfully attack it if we but provide the necessary army, navy and the bases needed for their efficient operation," the Wisconsin senator continued. "This policy requires that we do not permit islands in the Atlantic to fall into hostile hands. It means that we interpret the Monroe doctrine to include the prohibition of penetration by foreign nations through propaganda or otherwise in this hemisphere. The great body of expert opinion on national defense agrees that we can make this hemisphere safe against all comers. The destiny of our nation should be worked out in this hemisphere and not in Europe or Asia. In the end, our ideals and way of life will be infinitely more secure and it will cost us far less than participation in a foreign war."

LaFollette proposed that, besides keeping the arms embargo, congress "limit the war trade in other commodities, and thus prevent it from sidetracking our own re-armament program."

OVERHEARD AT TREASURE ISLAND:

"...and every coffee bean is carefully inspected"

Visitors to the Golden Gate International Exposition are invited to see "Behind the Cup," a sound picture in Cinecolor shown in Hills Bros. Exposition Theatre.

"I'LL NEVER GIVE UP The Correct Grind"

"Thank goodness, I can use The Correct Grind successfully in any kind of coffee-maker by merely following directions. And I'll never let anyone tell me to regret The Correct Grind because I'd give up flavor, aroma, and freshness."

IMPORTANT: Carefully observe timing for each method. Measure 2 level tablespoons of coffee to each cup of water. Vary water slightly for exact strength desired. Keep coffee-maker clean.

DRIP METHOD: 6 to 8 minutes preferred. If less than 2 1/2 capacity is made, water will drip too fast giving weak brew.

GLASS VACUUM MAKERS: Put upper bowl on after water boils. Coffee and water should be in contact 5 to 7 minutes.

PERCOLATOR: Start with cold or hot water. "Perco" 7 to 10 minutes after steady pumping starts.

COFFEE POT: Bring coffee and water to boiling. Stir well. Add small amount of cold water and let stand 5 minutes to settle grounds.

STEEPING: Pour boiling water on coffee. Stir well. Stir again in 5 minutes. Steep for a total of 10 to 15 minutes.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

OLD NORSE STORY

Leif, the son of Eric, is known in history as "Leif Ericson." It is almost certain that he led the first party of men to the mainland of North America.

The old Norse stories do not agree on all points of the adventure. One of them says Leif was returning from Norway to Greenland when his ship was blown from its course in a storm. It goes on to relate he reached a place called "Vinland" by accident.

Another account is given like this:

Leif Ericson's ship sailing toward Vinland.

"A Viking named Biarni told about travels on which he had seen lands west of Greenland. People thought he should have learned more about them, since he had been so close.

"There was now much talk about voyages of discovery. Leif, the son of Eric the Red, visited Biarni, and bought a ship from him. Then he gathered a crew of men, and formed a company of 35 persons.

"Leif asked his father to join them, and at last old Eric said he would go. Just before sailing, Eric rode on a pony toward the place of sailing. On the way, the pony stumbled, and the rider was thrown and hurt. He then declared it was not meant that he should go.

"So Leif became the leader. When they were ready they sailed out to sea.

"After a time, they reached a land which had flat rocks all the way from the sea to the ice mountains. A boat was sent ashore, but there was no sign of growing grass. 'I will call this country Helluland,' said Leif.

"Sailing further, they found a second land, with growing trees and broad stretches of white sand. 'This,' said Leif, 'I shall call Markland.'

"Again they sailed toward the southwest, and came to an island. They landed, and looked about them. The weather was fine, and there was dew on the grass. They touched the dew with their hands, and their hands to their mouths, and it seemed no water had ever before tasted so sweet.

"Then they boarded their ship again, and went into a certain sound which lay between the island and a cape which jutted out from the land on the north."

Tomorrow: Grapes in "Vinland."

Hollywood—If this is a very un-fidelerish eulogy, you'll just have to make the most of it. I want to pay tribute to one Vic McLaglen, who, judged by external, should be just a big, inarticulate, hard-boiled oaf, but who is, instead, the most useful Good Samaritan in all these parts. His philosophy of life is one that could make this strife-torn world a pretty swell place for everyone concerned.

Some years ago, Vic began to invest his earnings in happiness—and not for himself alone. He built a completely equipped sports center, where he organized a kids' club, its membership recruited from lower-income-bracket families. And then he set himself the task of teaching those boys how they could "go places" by cooperating with one another. He also organized similar adult groups and preached to them the same creed of good fellowship, good health and clean sports.

His enterprises have expanded until they now consume a major part of his time—and a major part of his cash. The Boys' Club, and the McLaglen Lancers, and all of the other groups have become self-supporting to an extent, but Vic still digs—and digs deep—to buy better equipment, to finance vacation jaunts, and to stage extraordinary events.

There was a time when Vic's philanthropies were misander-

COW LOSES COMPLEX

A cow "with an inferiority complex," which should have given lots of milk, but didn't, was cured when a herdsman in England tried milking her by hand instead of by electricity. London reports she now gives 2,000 gallons a year and has just won the Medal of Merit, the highest award for a Jersey.

to a $30,000 house... This movie star doll business is becoming epidemic—the Alexander Doll company has been granted permission by Metro to market a "Scarlett O'Hara" doll next January... Freak casting note: Marsha Hunt, 21-years-old, will play the mother of Tom Neal, 24, in "Call of the Wild." Both the studio and the Durbin family seem to have withdrawn their objections to publicity about Deanna's romance with Vaughn Paul—pictures of the pair, once strictly forbidden, are now to be released...

Eddie Collins vows he's through with swank premieres. Having paid deluxe prices for tickets to one of the evening, he arrived to find them located in the last row of the gallery. And, to add insult to injury, as he drove up in a yellow cab, a fan poked his head inside, and then turned to the milling autograph-hunters with the disgusted, one-word comment: "Rabbi!"

stood—as sincere philanthropies often are. Some people accused him of building a Fascist-like organization of militarism. I'm glad all that suspicion has been wiped out for Vic, a big overgrown kid, having the time of his life, is doing a world of good and paying a heavy money price for privilege of helping others to help themselves. It's something of a shock to compare his practical deeds with the windy talk of our pale pinks, who advocate a square deal for the underdogs—while fighting for bigger savings accounts.

New Rating Basis Is Being Planned For Play Contest

Presentations Will be Given at School Throughout Year

New London.—The 1-act play contest among classes at Washington High school will be held throughout the year instead of only during the second semester and a new system of rating will be used, according to action taken by the Thespian players, sponsors of the contest, at its first business meeting of the year.

The first play will be held Nov. 2 for the junior class and the seniors will present theirs Dec. 7. Miss Mary Larsen, faculty advisor for the Thespians, will name the directors. A percentage basis will be used for rating plays and Jack Seering was named chairman of a committee to work out a system of judging.

Irene Mesheke was elected treasurer of the group to fill the vacancy left by the absence of Marilyn Monroe whose family moved from the city.

The Thespians will stage a 1-act play in the near future to stimulate interest in dramatics. Special meetings will be held by the group to study various phases of dramatics and Kathleen Smith and Dorothy Allen were assigned to demonstrate the art of make-up at the next meeting. Regular meetings will be held the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month.

Standing committees named were: program, Maurice Levine, Jean Fox, Shirley Fonstad, Miss Mary Larsen; stage settings, Lawrence Manske, Clifford Forster, Dick Wyman, William Budwit. Maurice Levine is president; Richard Demming, vice president; Jean Fox, secretary.

New London.—The Ladies Afternoon league opened regular bowling with four teams at Prah's alleys Wednesday afternoon. The four captains are Mrs. Ralph Riedle, Mrs. Walter Raschke, Mrs. C. H. Kellogg and Mrs. Arthur Unger. Mrs. Riedle's squad led the keegling and the captain marked up 420 for highest series. Mrs. Ben Boese cracked a game of 183 and the team collected scores of 534 and 1468.

Business Men's Major Greenlaw's Garage continued to dominate the Business Men's Major league last night, losing their first game to Melklejohn's Clothes. A. Erickson pounded top scores of the evening with a 191 single and 512 series. Cristy's tied Melklejohn's for second by beating Wadhams two.

Girls' Club League The New London Constructors remained in the loop lead by downing Prah's News twice but the latter set up a high team game of 560. Miss Gertrude Ostermeier of the News spilled 171 and 441 to pace the girls. Carter-Hansons took third

Student Dance Will be Held After Grid Game

It was announced by the troupe after a special meeting this week. A small admission charge will be made. Kathleen Smith and Dorothy Allen were appointed to arrange decorations. The dance will be the first school social event of the current year.

Coach Greg Charlesworth ran his charges through a stiff night practice under the lights last night and will taper off this afternoon with final polishing and instructions for tomorrow night's game.

Plan No Inquest In Death of Worm

Funeral for Electrocuted Lineman Will be Held Saturday

New London.—Funeral services for Alfred Worm, 42, 326 E. Hancock street, who was electrocuted while working on a power line pole on the St. John's street road Wednesday afternoon, will be held at 1:30 Saturday afternoon at the residence and 2 o'clock at the Emanuel Lutheran church with the Rev. W. E. Pankow in charge.

No inquest will be made into his death, it was announced Wednesday by County Patrolman Roy Myhill, specially deputized coroner in the absence of Dr. John C. Johnson of Ogdensburg. Patrolman Myhill was near the scene when the tragedy occurred and rushed Worm to Community hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Co-workers believe Worm fell across the wires, carrying 2,300 volts, when a spur lost its grip on the pole. The shock threw him back into his life belt. The men were relocating wires of the New London Light and Water utility for which Worm was a lineman the last 22 years.

Born in New London Aug. 10, 1897, Alfred Worm lived in New London all his life. He married Irene Roloff 16 years ago. In 1918 he enlisted with the United States army for the World war but saw no active service.

Survivors are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Worm; two sons, Robert 15, Norman 6; two daughters, Esther Mae 14, Arline 13; three brothers, Edwin, New London; Arthur, Milwaukee; Henry, Chicago; one sister, Mrs. Arnold Lange, Milwaukee.

The body will be at the residence until the time of the funeral. Burial will be in Floral Hill cemetery.

Fined for Failing to Yield Right-of-Way

New London.—Kenneth Lorge, 21, Bear Creek, was fined $1 and costs in police court of Justice Fred J. Rogers Wednesday afternoon for failing to pull to the curb and grant the right of way to an emergency vehicle sounding a siren. Lorge was arrested by New London police at Beacon avenue after he impeded the progress of County Patrolman Roy Myhill who was hurrying to Community hospital with Alfred Worm.

NEIGHBORS HELP WILLIAM KLATT HUSK CORN

New London.—The William Klatt farm Monday night was the scene of one of the largest corn husking bees ever held in this vicinity. About 85 men, women, and children, working for 21 hours, husked the leaves off 1,000 bushels of golden cobs, filling the crib and leaving six wagon loads heaped for unloading the next day. At 10 o'clock in the evening, when the work was done, the workers were treated to a big "feed," which is always the grand finale of a husking bee.

Reading clockwise, those in the picture are: Alice Kent, Adeline Wendt, Ardine Arndt, Lois Spitzer, Mrs. John Wochinski, Mr. Wochinski, and Miss Margaret Klatt. Smaller bees are being held on other farms south-west of New London this week. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Re-Opening of Church Parlors To be Celebrated With Dinner

New London.—A public dinner in celebration of the re-opening of the church parlors after present alterations and improvements was planned for Wednesday, Nov. 15, by the Ladies Aid society of the Congregational church at a meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. C. Jost.

A description of cathedrals and churches she visited in Scotland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden last summer was given by Mrs. Beatrice Monsted, president of the society. Mrs. Paul Hoxie, who arrived from Florida last week to visit in New London, told about church work in her home state.

Plans for a district conference of the Royal Neighbors of America here early in November were started by the New London camp at a meeting Tuesday night. Mrs. S. E. Therns was named general chairman of arrangements. Mrs. Finger, Antigo, district deputy, was a visitor at the meeting.

Mrs. Chester Daggett, who is visiting from California, was honored at a surprise party at the home of Mrs. Arnold Krenke Tuesday afternoon. Those present were Mrs. Ben Handrich, Mrs. Albert Krause, Mrs. Ed Wirt, Mrs. Art Kopitzke, Mrs. Art Bork, Mrs. Charles Krenke, Mrs. Dean Vaughn, Mrs. Lance Algiers, Mrs. George Daggett, Mrs. John Hedike, Mrs. Milton Gough and Mrs. Arnold Krenke. Cards and dice entertained and the guest of honor was presented with a gift.

Eight members of the Women's Relief corps attended a district convention at Neenah Wednesday afternoon. They were Mrs. Peter Schulz, president; Mrs. Augusta Brenske, Mrs. W. M. Garot, Mrs. George Humbler, Mrs. John Baumgartner, Mrs. Walter Smith, Mrs. E. G. Brown and Mrs. C. D. Beaudoin.

The Stay-at-Home club surprised Mrs. James Lockyear at a party at sylvania, Douglas and Clay streets and Randolph, Pennsylvania and Adams streets. In the checkup while ordering the signs it was found that six Chilton streets owe their names to great American statesmen. They are Lincoln, Washington, Jefferson, Webster, Clay, and Madison. There are also several streets in Chilton that are named after the city's citizens as Heimann, Lehner, Adams, Douglas, Breed, Good, and Baldwin.

Missionary field work will be studied by the Women's Home Missionary society of the Methodist church at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Augusta Brenske at 2:30 Friday afternoon. Mrs. R. R. Holliday will give a paper on "Mountain Work in the South" and Mrs. Brenske will discuss "Migrant Work in the Union Fields of Ohio." Mrs. F. C. Andrews will present the story of a prominent missionary worker. Victoria Perry, a review of the society's study book, "Homeland Harvest," will be given by Mrs. W. J. McKee.

Reports on the state convention at Appleton last month will be heard from Mrs. R. R. Holliday, Mrs. William Dent and Mrs. McKee. Mrs. Edna Dalley will have the devotional topic.

Mrs. Paul Kochinke was a guest of the F. F. and F. club at the home of Mrs. Gerhardt Felsner Tuesday evening. Mrs. William Breitenfeldt and Mrs. Dan Brown won prizes. Mrs. Lawrence Graebel taking the traveling prize. The latter will entertain next week.

Street Signs to be Erected at Chilton

Chilton.—Residents of Chilton will soon be able to direct out of town motorists to the various streets in their city, according to Otto A. Horst, city clerk, who announced that the posts for the new street signs have arrived and he expects the signs themselves any day now. The street signs, which will be Chilton's first, will have white letters on a black background.

A total of 71 four-way signs and two six-way signs have been ordered. The six-way signs will be erected at the intersections of Penn-

Fiction Books are Added to New London Library Shelves

New London.—Some of the season's best fiction has been added to the New London Public library this week, according to Miss Grace Fleischer, librarian.

"Watch for the Dawn" by Stuart Cloete is another story of the Boers in Africa, as was his earlier "The Turning Wheels." The story is laid 20 years before the Great Trek of the Boers, when resentment of the burghers against the English was smouldering in the wild country above the Great Fish River.

In "Shanghai '37" Vicki Baum turns to the contemporary scene and an ingenious plot recalling "Grand Hotel." Shanghai on the eve of the Japanese invasion is the scene of this new novel—an international crossroads which is the focal point of a boiling, troubled world. Against this background Vicki Baum traces the lives of a dozen oddly assorted characters whom fate has gathered from all over the world, from the highest social strata to the lowest, and brought to a common doom.

"Gamble's Hundred" by Clifford Dowdley vividly explores a little-known epoch in our history—the struggle in Tidewater Virginia which began with Bacon's Rebellion in 1676 and came to an end in the 1730's. On one hand were the big landowners—aristocratic, arrogant, wealthy, with their English mannerisms, their beautiful wives, and the slaves who built the foundation of their economic empire. Arrayed against them were the small planters who were being crowded to the wall, whose tobacco was burned, confiscated or sold at outrageous prices—free Americans but in their way almost as driven and desperate as our Dust Bowl farmers of today.

Bearing the romantic title "April Was When it Began" is Barry Benefield's new book. Benefield will be remembered as the creator of "Valiant is the Word for Carrie." The characters in his new novel are as endearing as Carrie and the mood again is one of spring days.

Fourteen factories in Northampton, England, are making 2,000,000 pairs of army footwear values at $8,250,000.
